National Broiler Market At A Glance

Atlanta, Ga.
November 25, 2003
Report Supplied By USDA

Trade sentiment was mixed, ranging steady to about steady in the West, steady to fully steady in the Midwest, and at least steady in the East. Retail demand was limited as Thanksgiving Day nears and interest remained focused on turkeys and other meat items. Food service was light to fair since many facilities will be closed for the holiday. Supplies were adequate to closer balanced due to plant closures and reduced schedules. Truck shortages were being reported during this busy time resulting in even lighter trading. In the parts structure, movement was light and selective. Wings were balanced to tight and moving, breasts were at least adequate, and dark meat was sufficient. In production areas, live supplies were moderate at weights in a full range.

The Composite Weighted Average Price for 1½4/03 was 66.02, compared to 64.79 last week, and 53.36 a year ago.

FARM SHOW 2004

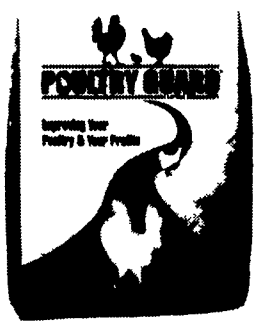
What a treat we have in store for the annual Lancaster Farming issue of Farm Show!

Scheduled for the Jan. 10 issue: features from farmers who are going to the winter agricultural showcase event at the Farm Show Complex and their experiences in attending the great event in Harrisburg. Also scheduled: the annual FFA Keystone Degree winners and a complete schedule of events, including the many demonstrations for farmers during Farmer Days.

POULTRY GUARD™
LITTER AMENDMENT

New Poultry Guard™ Litter Amendment is a unique activated clay that delivers consistent ammonia control without the handling inconvenience associated with other poultry litter treatments.

Unlike these other treatments, Poultry Guard Litter Amendment is easy and convenient to apply and needs no incorporation or activation. Fewer application variables mean more consistent performance. In addition, Poultry Guard can be applied up to five days before bird set, whenever it's convenient for the grower.



Using Poultry Guard Litter Amendment Is As Simple As...

Apply
Simply spread over poultry litter.
- No incorporation
- No moisture activation
- No complicated instructions for heating and ventilation in conjunction with application

Bird Set
Poultry Guard can be applied when it's most convenient, up to five days before bird set.
- No application timing headaches between clean out and bird set
- No last minute application after equipment has been lowered

Control Ammonia
Poultry Guard will deliver immediate and long-term ammonia control and give birds a healthier growing environment.
- No more dangerously high levels of ammonia to stunt growth

You be the judge! We are confident this litter amendment will improve your poultry and your profits.

East Fluid Milk And Cream Review

Madison, Wis.
November 25, 2003
Report Supplied by USDA

SPOT PRICES OF CLASS II CREAM, dollars per lb butterfat: F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: 1.6211-1.8853. Delivered Equivalent. Atlanta: 1.7051-1.9213 mostly 1.7532-1.8973.

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, dollars per lb. wet solids, F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: Class II, includes monthly formula prices: .8700-.9300. Class III, spot prices: 1.2000-1.3000.

SPOTS SHIPMENTS OF GRADE A MILK: FLORIDA: This Week: In 23; Out 0; Last Week: In 159, Out 0; Last Year: In 55, Out 0. SOUTHEAST STATES: This Week: In 0, Out 0; Last Week: In 0, Out 0; Last Year: In 0, Out 0.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Due to changes in milk supply agreements, milk import/export totals are not directly comparable to year ago figures and to shipments prior to April 1, 2003.

Milk production is about steady in most of the East. Colder weather in the Southeast early this week is helping milk output increase along seasonal patterns. The milk flow in the Northeast is mostly steady to lighter. Compared to most years, milk volumes are very tight in the Northeast. Some of the tighter milk supply can be attributed to the fact that there are fewer milk producers than a year ago and that November is traditionally the low month for milk production per cow. The continued good demand for Class I milk should come to a halt at midweek when school lunch programs stop and retail needs are filled. Contacts already report slower milk orders after Tuesday. Florida's need for outside milk dropped significantly, but handlers expect in-state milk production and the slower Class I needs to carry them through the holiday weekend. Manufacturing plant contacts see little or no extra milk showing up at their plants this weekend. Some report that they have never seen milk this tight during a Thanksgiving week. Those plants that have been supplying Florida's need may have extra milk to process, but it will be welcomed.

The condensed skim market is generally steady. Supplies are tight and few spot sales are being reported. In some instances, producers are having difficulty filling contracts because of the tight supply of surplus milk.

The fluid cream market remains strong. Offerings are tight and demand remains good. Orders for holiday items like egg nog, bottled cream, etc. are down this week. However, with cream supplies as tight as they have been, some producers of these products continue to make as much as they can. Cream buyers/users are not finding the volumes they desire. Suppliers/producers are not always able to fill all demand for cream and some demand is going unfilled. Spot prices are often lower as last week's CME butter average did drop 1.34 cents from the previous week. Multiples range from mostly unchanged to higher. Cream cheese output remains fairly brisk as orders are good through the year end holidays. Ice cream production is holding up better than expected. Many ice cream producers are down for a long weekend this week, but expect to be back on line next week. Some ice cream producers are building inventories ahead of their traditional down time during the year end holiday period. Churning activity remains light. Outside of contracts, there is little cream being offered to butter makers.

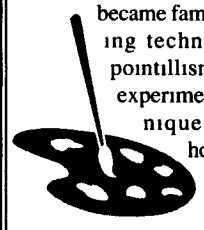
What's the Point?

French artist George Seurat was born on December 2, 1859, and became famous for the painting technique known as pointillism. Children can experiment with this technique while making holiday cards. Give them a small blank card and have them outline a simple shape, such as a tree. Let them use cotton swabs and paints to fill the outline with individual dots of color. Use darker colors for the shaded areas and lighter colors for areas turned toward the viewer. Put the finished cards on the mantel, stand back, and let your eyes mix the colors from a distance.



Chocolate Nut Clusters

8 ounces bittersweet or semisweet chocolate
1 1/2 cups shelled whole hazelnuts, almonds, or pecans

Preheat oven to 375°F. Place nuts on a baking sheet and bake in oven for 5 to 8 minutes, stirring occasionally, until lightly browned. Let cool. Melt the chocolate in the top of a double boiler over hot water. Add the toasted nuts, stirring until well covered with chocolate. With a spoon and your fingers, drop a cluster of three or four nuts onto a sheet of waxed paper and let the clusters sit until they harden. MAKES ABOUT 3 DOZEN.

OPINION

Preserve Farmland Preservation

We learned recently from our friends at Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB) exactly how close Pennsylvania may have come to a dangerous precedent.

According to PFB, House Bill 66 — introduced in Pennsylvania's House of Representatives to transfer state-owned farmland in Warren County fo use as a Wal-Mart (but defeated by a wide margin this week) — would have set an alarming precedent for the future of farmland preservation in Pennsylvania.

Simply put, if Wal-Mart or other large shopping malls want to go up, let them take established brownfields (old factories or other facilities not in use) and convert them, if need be. Leave good, productive farmland alone.

According to statements by PFB, in the past, government-owned hospitals, prisons, retirement homes, and others allowed patients, inmates, and residents to work on farms owned by those facilities. Regulatory actions halted the ability for this to continue, and many of the farms were leased to area farmers.

Numerous attempts to sell the farmland for other purposes have occurred over the years, and have always been defeated. If any more bills like HB 66 would pass, noted PFB, that could "set a new direction for the destruction of prime farmland, and will also make it easer to convert farmland in all counties to nonfarm uses."

So those 67 acres of prime farmland in Warren County located at Warren State Hospital are protected for now, thankfully. Last year, Warren County's commissioners decided to sell the land to a commercial developer. The transaction would have required passage of state legislation to transfer the final 29 acres of the property to the county and remove an existing agricultural use restriction on another 22 acres.

PFB reminds us that it has been the long-standing policy of the commonwealth to restrict farmland it owns for agricultural use to the fullest extent possible if such land is sold or transferred. What's more, "Pennsylvania has never before removed an agricultural use restriction once placed on a significant tract of farmland. To make matters worse, the land in question has been actively used for agriculture by a farm family," noted PFB in a recent statement.

The measure was strongly defeated by a very wide margin on Tuesday. Pennsylvania's farmland preservation policies remain strong, and no precedent was set — good for land preservationists, good for farmers, good for the state's agribusiness.

Let's stop these kind of bills before they start. Contact your state senator and representative and ask them to oppose any similar bills and preserve farmland — and keep farmland preservation viable and secure.

To Deal With Increasing Prices For Soybeans, Soybean Meal

The general outlook for the commodity markets is for the corn price to remain steady and the price of soybeans and soybean meal to continue to rise. Since September, the futures market prices for soybeans and soybean meal have risen roughly 20-25 percent, depending on the market report that you read. This rise in protein prices will be reflected in the cost of purchased feed for your dairy.

Lancaster dairy agent Dr. Ken Griswold suggests there are two general ways to work on controlling purchased feed costs.

First, examine your ration for opportunities to lower the total crude protein (CP) level that will not have a negative impact on milk production. The effective use of protein for an individual cow is dependent on a number of factors, including stage of lactation or days in milk (DIM), lactation number, level of milk production, and dry matter intake (DMI). Cows in early lactation (less than 100 DIM) are more sensitive to changes in CP concentration than later lactation cows. A dairy producer should work closely with a nutritionist to monitor the DMI, milk production, and milk components (that is, fat percentage and protein percentage) of the cows when CP levels are changed in the ration.

The second manner in which you can control protein feed costs is to utilize alternative protein sources. Urea and other nonprotein nitrogen (NPN) sources can be used to replace protein in the diet. However, care must be taken to avoid potential pitfalls associated with excessive protein solubility. Therefore, urea is well-matched with high corn silage and dry grain diets and less well-suited for high haylage diets.

Make sure to have mineral levels adjusted to accommodate the urea in the diet, especially sulfur. Gradually introduce the urea over several weeks' time into the ration, starting at 0.5 percent of the finished feed. Do not feed urea at level greater than 1.5 percent of the finished feed.

Other protein sources are normally distinguished by the level of protein they contain. Intermediate protein sources include brewer's grains, corn gluten feed, and whole cottonseed. High protein sources include distillers' dried grains with solubles (DDGS), corn gluten meal, cottonseed meal, and animal proteins such as blood meal, fish meal, or feather meal. All of these protein sources have some drawbacks to their use based on nutrient content, palatability, antinutritional factors, or price, so consult with your nutritionist or feed representative prior to making dramatic changes to your feeding program.

For example, currently DDGS are well underpriced based on nutritive value, but the rest of the diet must be balanced to provide adequate lysine, especially for the early lactation cow. Furthermore, there can be a great deal of variability in the quality of DDGS depending on the method of processing. Always seek the advice of your nutritionist for options in feeding program.

To Plan Your Farm Transfer

Planning for your successor, or someone to take over your farm, is the most important task you need to complete if you want your farm to survive into the next generation. Yet, according to some recent statistics, many farm families have not identified a successor for their family business or even talked to family members about what will happen to the farm when they die.

To assist you in this process, Pennsylvania Farm Link and Penn State Extension will conduct a Passing on the Farm Workshop at the Lighthouse Restaurant, 4301 Philadelphia Avenue in Chambersburg, on Dec. 16 from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Farmers seeking ideas for successfully passing their farm to family members, or those interested in locating interested, unrelated farmers to take over an operation, should attend. Beginning farmers are also urged to participate to glean ideas for building their businesses. The workshop will conclude with a panel of local farmers discussing how they transferred their own farms.

Lunch at a cost of $10 per person will be served in the restaurant. Reservations are required by Dec. 9. Pease mail your reservations to Pennsylvania Farm Link, 2708 N. Colebrook Road, Manheim, PA 17545. Questions about this workshop or farm transfer issues can be answered at (717) 664-7077. The Lighthouse Restaurant is located on the left one-quarter mile north of the intersection of Philadelphia Avenue and Sunset Boulevard in Chambersburg.

HOLY WARS?

Background Scripture:
Jude.
Devotional Reading:
Galatians 6:1-10.

Back in the 1940s, when I was a youth, the morality scene was much different from today. My home church was against the use of tobacco, alcohol, dancing, and recreational activities on Sunday. Sexual relations were sanctioned only within marriage and babies born out of wedlock were a major scandal. (A recent report indicates that 30 percent of American babies are illegitimate.) Not that our society then measured up to them, but those were the standards.

Even then I believed the standards to be too legalistic and often hypocritical. For example, one woman in our church stopped cigarette smokers on the street to advise them of their immorality. Her husband, however, smoked cigars and for some strange reason that was not "immoral." Square dancing was acceptable, but not any other type.

I noted that the sins of the flesh were often much more openly and consistently condemned than the sins of the mind and spirit. Sexual sins were almost always of greater importance and condemned more loudly than lying, cheating, fraud, gossip, covetousness, materialistic idolatry, and prejudice.

As theologian Reinhold Niebuhr observed, "If there were a drunken orgy somewhere, I would bet 10 to 1 a church member was not in it. But, if there was a lynching, I would bet 10 to 1 a church member was in it."

The Extremes

This observation was accurate when it was written, but maybe not today. The possibility of church members participating in a drunken orgy are not as slim as they once were. In the 1940s, the churches represented a more conservative morality than the rest of society. In the years since the 1960s it is often difficult to discern a Christian morality different from that of society. Now, anything goes!

Americans find it impossible to understand that Islamics are so critical of our society, but should we be surprised? Our licentious way of life today stands in sharp contrast to fundamentalist Islamic society. They believe we are obsessed with sex, addiction, and sheer hedonism. While I believe they are far too moralistic, I cannot escape the conviction that our society is far too immoral, including not only those listed above, but also business corruption, rampant injustice, consumeristic materialism, and a disdain for those who cannot help themselves.

Some Islamic societies seem out of control from a different perspective. Yesterday, I read that the Islamic appeals court of Nigeria had determined that Amani Lawal, a woman accused of adultery, will not be buried in the ground up to her neck and then stoned to death. I felt elated because I had joined with many others in writing letters to the Nigerian ambassador protesting this barbaric sentence. Yet today, some Nigerian Moslems are now protesting her release as a deterioration of morals.

Both Hypocritical

We have one society out of control and another stifled by control — with hypocrisy at both extremes. So how do Christians establish a moral stance between the extremes?

The Letter of Jude, the most intense and vehement book of the New Testament, is a call to action, not a reasoned treatise, against immorality. Worst of all, this crisis is coming from inside the church. "For admission has been secretly gained by some.... ungodly persons who pervert the grace of our God into licentiousness."

Not only are they immoral, but their hedonistic practices are adversely influencing church members. "These are blemishes on your love feast, as they boldly carouse together, looking after themselves" (v. 12). And so that this is not taken too lightly, he compares them to waterless clouds, fruitless trees, wild waves of the sea, and "... wandering stars for whom the nether gloom of darkness has been reserved for ever.'

"... Build yourselves up on your most holy faith; pray in the Holy Spirit; keep yourselves in the love of God; wait for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life. And convince some, who doubt; save some, by snatching them out of the fire; on some have mercy with fear...." Jude is calling, not for a holy war, but a holy witness.

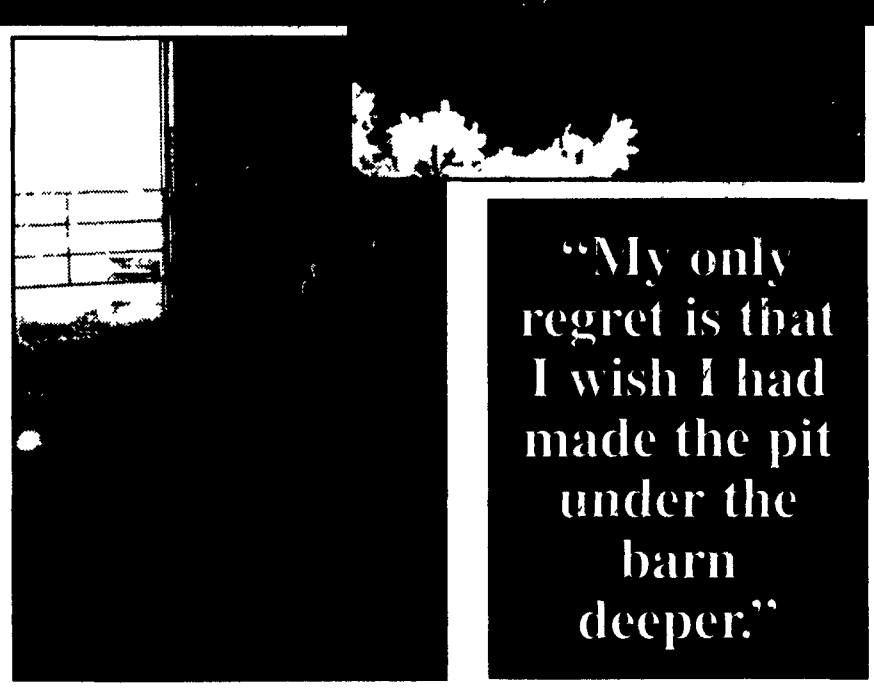
"The biggest benefit is the labor savings."



"My only regret is that I wish I had made the pit under the barn deeper."

"In my previous barn, I scraped two times a day; and I was tired of it, not to mention the danger to the cows if a cable snapped. I thought I would not be able to justify the additional cost until my builder suggested a design change which brought the cost down relatively close to the original design.

The biggest benefit to me is the labor savings. Two people can handle all the chores for our herd. I save money not only on labor but also on repairs.

The cows' hooves are healthier, and they show heat better because they are not afraid of slipping. During the five years with slats, I have not lost a single heifer from slipping. The cows stay much cleaner, even with my misting system for cooling them. The water has a place to escape."

START WITH THE BEST!
POURED CONCRETE WALLS

You get about 40% more concrete for your dollar with a poured, solid concrete basement as compared to a hollow core block basement.

A poured solid concrete basement weighs about 50 lbs. more per cubic foot! Far denser. What's more, poured solid concrete walls are monolithic ..there are no joints!

This is why laboratory tests show poured, solid concrete basements have many times the flexural and compressive strength to withstand the side and down pressures caused by earth, wind, water and building loads and the material density to resist water penetration.

Best of all, thanks to modern and efficient construction techniques, poured, solid concrete basements are competitively priced

Solid Concrete For:

- Manure Pit Walls
- Hog House Walls
- Barnyard Walls
- Chicken House Walls
- Retaining Walls
- House Foundation Walls
- Silage Pit Walls
- Cistern Walls
- Concrete Decks
- Concrete Pit Tops

MARKET LOOKS BETTER

- Barrels drop $0.07 per pound for the week.
- Butter prices fluctuate.
- Milk supply tight.
- Cheese and butter inventories lower.

Once again the market provided a mixed message this week. Barrel cheese prices fell $0.07 per pound during the week and butter prices rose, then quickly fell back by Friday. At the same time, the milk production and cold storage reports were released. Both suggest the milk supply is well under control and that inventories of butter and cheese are dropping.

The milk production report indicates that milk production in October for 20 select states was down 0.2 percent from October 2002. The estimated U.S. milk supply increased from 13,399 million pounds in September to 13,783 million pounds in October 2003.

On a daily average basis, the October output is down 0.6 percent from the same month a year before.

The more shocking number was the estimated U.S. herd size. Cow numbers for the U.S. fell from 9.153 million head on January to 9.022 million head by October 2003, a drop of 131,000 head.

With protein and fat seasonally trending higher in October, plants received more components in October relative to the month before. However, if one assumes that the protein and fat percentages are slightly depressed relative to a year ago, than commodity output for October 2003 (relative to October 2002) could be even lower than the drop in the milk supply.

In other words, I expect the market will perceive a shortfall in commodity production for October 2003. USDA will release the Dairy Products report on Dec. 4, 2003.

The Cold Storage report indicated that butter inventories (commercial plus government) fell 45 million pounds between September and October 2003. While that is impressive, the ending butter commercial inventory of 150.8 million pounds for October is still well above the 5-year average of 107.2 million pounds.

The same, however, is not true for American cheese inventories, which fell 28 million pounds between September and October. Ending commercial inventories for October were 479.1 million pounds, which is just below the 5-year average of 489.5 million pounds.

So what does this all mean? Well, I'm getting more bullish about the outlook for 2004. The milk supply will continue to be tight as long as the ban for live

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Review

St. Joseph, Mo.
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL FEEDER & STOCKER CATTLE SUMMARY for week ending Nov. 21 — Total Receipts: 361,900; last week 447,100; last year 443,100. Direct: 32,200; last week 49,500; last year 79,700. Video/Internet: 1,900; last week 34,100; last year 2,700. Auctions: 327,800; last week 363,500; last year 360,700. This week's reported auction volume included 30 percent calves and yearlings weighing over 600 lbs and 43 percent heifers.

Compared to last week, calf prices were uneven and yearling feeders were steady to 2.00 higher on an extremely limited test. Receipts were much lighter than a year ago as many producers could not resist prices and sold a bit earlier than usual. Calf demand remains good, but seems significantly better for lightweights weighing under 500 lbs which give the buyers more options and will hedge past the April CME feeder contracts that have been trading at a discount to March and May. This lightweight demand was evident in the Southeastern markets, where the bulk of the reduced supplies weighed from 200-400 lbs and traded steady to 4.00 higher. In the Plains and the Mountain States, where most of the calves weigh over 500 lbs, prices were unevenly steady to 2.00 lower. The quality of the calf offerings in these areas was also reportedly plainer as the fall runs have peaked and many of the most reputation herds have already sold. Demand has dramatically increased for female replacements as ranches complete their preg-testing and cull/keep sorting for the year. Many cow-calf producers could not resist the handsome calf market and sold most or all of their heifers. Instead, they can increase their production quicker by obtaining bred heifers or young cows from someone elses herd. Most producers take pride in building their own herds, but business is business. Auctions in western ranch country, including sales in La Junta, Colorado quoted bred heifers over 1000.00 per head and young cows up to 1125.00. Buyers don't like having to winter new replacement purchases, but most cattlemen agree that the replacement market will be significantly higher in the spring. Fed cattle, yearling feeders, and slaughter cows have all seen record prices in the last few months and calves are not slouching; that leaves only replacement females to make it a clean sweep for the industry. Fridays cattle-on-feed report was within expectations, although placements and marketings in October were higher than the average guess. There were 3 percent more cattle being fed on November 1st than a year ago, placements were 16 percent higher and marketings were 94 percent of last year. Placements under 700 lbs were 25 percent higher than 2002, which coincides with the lack of yearlings this fall.

Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL SLAUGHTER CATTLE SUMMARY - Week Ending November 21 - Compared to last week: Slaughter cattle trade moderate in the north with market 3.00-4.00 lower on live basis and 2.00 lower dressed. The poor yields and grading performance of many cattle is creating the noticeable disparity between live and dressed trades. Trade turned active in the southern plains Friday with brisk movement at 98.00, steady to 2.00 lower. Packers are battling negative margins and are in need of inventory despite the upcoming short kill week. Packers expecting decent beef demand following Holiday weekend. Boxed beef values Friday a.m. averaged 157.50 up 2.24 from last Friday. Sales of slaughter cattle on a national basis for negotiated cash trades were 137,450 head through noon Friday with movement increasing rapidly at time of this report. Last week's full count was very light at 102,650 head.

Tree Planting On Poultry Farms

NEWARK, Del. — If a new grower initiative for planting tree windbreaks takes root over the next few years, the poultry houses that dot the Delmarva countryside could get a facelift, increase grower profit, and improve the quality of water, soil, and air.

To inform growers and poultry companies about this strategy, Bud Malone, University of Delaware Cooperative Extension specialist for poultry, and Dot Abbott-Donnelly, extension educator for renewable resources, have written a UD Extension bulletin (#158) that details the environmental and business advantages of planting vegetative screens around poultry houses.

Entitled "Environmental and Production Benefits of Trees for Poultry Farms," the publication includes design plants, a list of tree varieties that make good buffer strips, planting recommendations, maintenance requirements, and information to help growers decide if the effort is worth the investment for their operations.

"University research has found that planting trees around poultry houses offers production and environmental benefits. For example, trees create a natural filter, thus serving as a cost-effective way to help reduce odor, dust, feathers, noise, and ammonia-laden dust particles that are part of any poultry operation," Malone said. "In addition, in the eyes of the public, lines of tree help to promote a positive image of agriculture by screening a neighbor's view of everyday poultry activities such as live-haul crews and litter cleanout."

Tree windbreaks also save production costs. When strategically placed, Abbott-Donnelly says, trees aid in reducing heating and cooling costs by protecting houses from wind and snow in winter and from the sun in summer.

"Trees also filter nutrients in surface water and groundwater. Studies have shown that a growing tree windbreak can take up 200 to 300 pounds of excess nitrogen per acre per year," said Abbott-Donnelly, stressing the environmental advantages. "And because trees take carbon dioxide out of the atmosphere, store the carbon in their wood and release oxygen back into the air, it is estimated that a single-row, evergreen windbreak one mile long traps and stores carbon equivalent to 60 tons of carbon dioxide."

Poultry growers who would like a copy of "Environmental and Production Benefits of Trees for Poultry Farms" can call their poultry company. If the publication is not available, contact Malone at (302) 856-7303 or malone@udel.edu.

New Resource Helps Farmers Forge Success

BELTSVILLE, Md. — Responding to keen interest from farmers and ranchers in developing new production and marketing alternatives, the Sustainable Agriculture Network (SAN) recently released a user-friendly publication to help producers develop goal-oriented business plans for farms and rural businesses. Published in collaboration with the Minnesota Institute for Sustainable Agriculture, the publication, called Building a Sustainable Business, brings the business planning process alive and transforms farm-grown inspirations into profitable enterprises.

Building a Sustainable Business: A Guide to Developing a Business Plan for Farms and Rural Businesses includes blank worksheets and step-by-step strategies for developing a detailed, lender-ready business plan to take advantage of new opportunities, such as:

- Organic Farming
- On-farm Processing
- Direct Marketing
- Agri-tourism
- Alternative Crops
- Adding Value

"This guide is a terrific resource for producers seeking to develop a sound plan for a sustainable agricultural business," said Damona Doye, extension economist, Oklahoma State University. "It is reader-friendly and thought-provoking."

The 280-page publication follows farmers Dave and Florence Minar through a major transition on their Minnesota dairy farm. The experiences of the Minars and five other farm families lend a real-life perspective, illustrating how they research alternatives, determined potential markets, and evaluated financial options.

To order Building a Sustainable Business, send $14 plus $3.95 for shipping/handling to Sustainable Agriculture Publications, 210 Hills Building, University of Vermont, Burlington, VT 05405-0082. Credit card and discounted volume orders may be placed by calling (802) 656-0484. Preview the publication online at www.sare.org/publications.

CUSHIONED EGG

Electronic Drives

The innovative, electronically-controlled drive system enables eggs to be transported at a smooth, continuous speed on an endless conveyor with drive units located intermittently up to 150' apart.

Optimum Rod Spacing

Space between each cushioned rod is the key to egg separation and preventing smaller eggs from slipping through the conveyor while allowing all debris to be sifted out.

Design Flexibility

The unique "Cushioned Rod" egg conveyor enables you to custom design a system that gently transports eggs up, down, around corners and in a continuous straight line without transfer, and even declines to match processing equipment.

Custom Corners

ROD CONVEYOR TRANSPORT SYSTEM

Uni-Trac Construction

The "Cushioned Rod" egg conveyor is setting industry standards for efficiency. flexibility and cost savings with a unified construction design that eliminates the problems of egg transfer.

Rol-Link Chain System

An endless, custom designed, roller chain system and flexible cushioned plastic rods, cradle eggs in a gentle position that helps eliminate collisions and breakage.

Ag, DCED Secretaries Award Small Business First Loan

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — On Monday, Agriculture Secretary Dennis C Wolff and Community and Economic Development Secretary Dennis Yablonsky awarded Gro-Lan Farms $200,000 as part of the Small Business First Program.

"We are pleased that Gro-Lan Farms is able to benefit from the Small Business First Loan program," said Wolff. "By choosing to enhance their current facility, they are taking an important step toward securing a more profitable future for their farm. The Small Business First Program is an important economic development tool for agriculture. I hope that more agricultural operations will take advantage of the benefits of this worthwhile program."

The SBF program, an economic development initiative, provides low-interest loans of up to $200,000 for businesses with 100 employees or fewer. Last spring, the General Assembly opened up the SBF program for the first time to agricultural entities.

"It is absolutely crucial that we do a better job to support one of Pennsylvania's largest industries," Yablonsky said. "I am committed to providing the necessary financial tools and incentives to assist farmers with their capital funding needs. Through the Governor's proposed stimulus program, this financing will become a revolving loan fund that will ensure farmers will have continued access to financial assistance in the future."

Gro-Lan Farms, a 300-acre facility, is owned and operated by Jay and Jeff Grove in Shippensburg. The SBF loan will be used toward the construction of a 186-foot X 113-foot freestall barn. The larger barn will allow the dairy operation to expand into a modern, environmentally sound facility conducive to improved animal health.

"This project represents a major commitment to the future of agriculture and to the future of our farm," said Jeff Grove. "We are thrilled to be the beneficiaries of the Small Business First Loan Program, and hope that other farmers will be encouraged to apply to the program after seeing what it can do to help farmers expand and improve their operations."

The SBF program provides low-interest loans for small businesses for land and building purchases and construction, machinery, equipment, and funds.

Businesses interested in applying for funds through the Small Business First program must submit their loan application to the Area Loan Organization (ALO) that services the area where the borrower's business is located.

For more information about the Small Business Loan Program, visit DCED's Website at www.inventpa.com.

2004 AG DIRECTORY

The year 2004 marks the fourth annual Lancaster Farming Ag Directory.

Looking for the experts in field and barnyard management? Looking for the leaders for crop and farm financial planning? Then you've come to the right place.

For 2004, Lancaster Farming plans a new portion of the book: "Call On The Experts." It's a component of our Ag Directory helpful for those seeking answers – right at your fingertips. The directory is scheduled in the Dec. 27 issue.

In 2003, the Ag Directory totaled 152 pages and was jam-packed with contact names, numbers, addresses, and even Websites from agriculture in our eight-state region, including Pennsylvania and surrounding states. The "essential" reference book will include more names, addresses, phone numbers, and Web addresses than ever before.

Make the 2004 Lancaster Farming Ag Directory your source of expert information from the more than $50 billion regional ag industry.

Ag Chamber Speaker: 'Normal Doesn't Live Here'

CHARLENE M. SHUPP ESPENSHADE
Lancaster Farming Staff

WILLOW STREET (Lancaster Co.) — At the annual Lancaster County Chamber of Commerce Ag Industry banquet Monday evening, keynote speaker Jolene Brown gave agriculture a powerful message about survival.

Brown spoke to 780 attendees of the banquet at Willow Valley Resort and Conference Center about why "Normal Doesn't Live Here Anymore."

"It used to be in agriculture, if you really understood weeds, seeds, breeds, feeds, and chemicals, we could be good!" said Brown. "All of a sudden, we need a new set of skills. We must know how to educate, mediate, negotiate, arbitrate, and communicate."

Brown is an international speaker and farmer from Iowa. She travels across North America talking about the importance of balancing traditional and modern attitudes in farming.

"We can't go back to the way things were," Brown said, stressing the need to build on the success of the past and not to live in it.

"We have to learn how to ride this roller coaster and celebrate change," she said.

To draw her information for her speech, Brown interviewed 100 people about changes that they had to adapt to. By speaking with each one, Brown compiled an account of their experiences and her own. She has developed advice on how to celebrate change, incorporating her advice into several changes that agriculture faces today.

Using humor, stories, and observations, Brown focused on three changes in agriculture, its pace, the people, and the process.

"Everything is what I want, when I want it, and I want it yesterday, so say consumers," said Brown. She notes humorously that the four food groups have changed to "fast food, tofu, dine out, and carry out," and that the most profitable sections of the large grocery stores chains are the deli's with the drive-up window.

Brown also said that driving the increased pace is technology. Cell phones, pagers, and computers have made it easier for the customer to access products and information.

The second point of change highlighted by Brown was how the people agriculture serves continues to change.

"Not only has the pace changed, so has the people that we serve," said Brown. "There is a world out there that does not understand what we do. And they have a tremendous amount of power, they vote."

Through the use of several humorous stories about people Brown had met during her travels, she depicted the lack of understanding of the nonfarm public and how she handled each opportunity to promote agriculture.

Brown emphasized the importance of farmers to educate the public about farm life, but cautioned, "Be very careful of what type of commercial you and I give for agribusiness and all of agriculture. We are a walking, talking commercial."

Challenging the audience to always be aware of what others are thinking, she shared her experiences about being placed on a panel with representatives from PETA, Greenpeace, and the Sierra Club.

"If you just hang around the folks you already know, you just affirm what you already know," stressed Brown. "It is when you get around the 'rebels' you learn to do one or two things. You learn how to stand up and express carefully what it is you do believe in, and you bring it back to friends and the profession that you still profess to love."

Changes such as country of origin and other regulations summarize Brown's belief that the process of agriculture has changed.

Using the troubles of the financial industry as an example, Brown said, "Everything must be carefully measured and monitored." She pointed to the demand of consumers for the change and our global marketplace.

In her final thoughts about change, Brown noted as everyone tries to move forward with change, there will "be surprises along the way."

To help adapt to the changes, Brown encourages the use of laughter, enjoyment of your job, and to associate with positive people.

Concluding with a chorus of "Row, Row, Row Your Boat," Brown said, "We always have a choice. We can drift. We can correct. We can work to change the system or you and I are going to be a part of a whole new system. I want you to row your boat gently down the stream. Don't go it alone, bring this organization with you, bring your friends with you. Then go merrily, merrily along because Lancaster County agriculture is not a spectator sport."

Several awards were presented at the banquet.

Jolene Brown, right, captivated the banquet audience with her message of "Normal Doesn't Live Here Anymore." Joining her is Lancaster Chamber agriculture committee chairperson Sonia Wasco.

Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Carla Martin, right, and Lancaster County Alternate Dairy Princess Stephanie Donough were at the banquet, joining in the celebration of Lancaster County's agriculture industry.

Sonia Wasco presented the 2003 George C. Delp Award, which is given to a Lancaster county resident who has made a significant personal contribution to preserving and enhancing agriculture in Lancaster County.

The 2003 recipient is Dr. Allen Rider of New Holland North America. Rider is vice president of New Holland North American Agribusiness. In the past, he has been the senior research engineer.

Waso noted that Rider has numerous professional and technical organizational affiliations that "it would take most of the night to list them all," she said, and has written 500 technical papers.

Rider is on the board of directors for the Lancaster County Chamber of Commerce and Industry. In addition, he is president of the American Society of Agriculture Engineers and works with a local Boy Scout troop.

In his remarks, Rider stressed that it was the vision of people like George Delp who have made "New Holland what it is."

Agriculture Secretary Dennis Wolff provided congratulatory remarks for the five Century Farm Award winners and presented each farm with a certificate for their centennial accomplishment.

The five farms recognized were John and Thelma Wolgemuth, Mount Joy; William and Peggy Longenecker, Mount Joy; Dennis and Ellen Eby, Gap; John and Gladys Landis, Leola; and Hahn Farming Enterprises, Lillie, Jay, and Clifford Hahn, Linda Bair, and Barbara Forney, Columbia.

Trout Deal Bad For Pa. Growers

Two Pennsylvania trout farms bid on parts of the contract, which was offered to bidders piecemeal as part of a line-item bidding process. The bidding took place in June, with trout suppliers allowed to enter bids on any or all of the 96 trout stockings.

Bid invitations were sent to trout growers in March, along with a list of requirements to assure that the contracted fish are healthy and safe. The requirements included stipulations that the fish pass the state's PCB protocol, show no clinical signs of disease, and be certified free of enteric redmouth (ERM) disease.

In late May, DGS issued a list of changes to the original rules. Among them was the addition of a requirement to test annually for several other disease-causing pathogens. The bidding date was extended from June 4 to June 11.

Laurel Hill Trout Farm, Rockwood, Somerset County, was one of the Pennsylvania bidders, submitting bids for 27 percent of the specified trout, Kane said.

Bob Pritts, owner of Laurel Hill Trout Farm, said that the fact there was no minimum number of trout stockings that a bidder could win and no way to make an accurate determination of compliance costs hindered his ability to bid competitively.

Pritts produces about 100,000 pounds of trout per year, mostly for stocking in private waters in southwestern Pennsylvania.

Compliance costs would have become more affordable in supplying a large number of fish, but a small number would have been a losing proposition, according to Pritts.

"If I would have gotten just a couple bids, I couldn't have afforded to do the compliance work," Pritts said. " 'It was hard to factor in a price because you didn't know know how many fish you would actually get."

Disease testing in North Carolina is handled for free by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service out of its Georgia office, according to Tom Ort, Tellico manager.

In Pennsylvania, however, trout growers must foot the bill for the disease tests, at a cost of "thousands of dollars," according to Renee Eckley, president of Limestone Springs Fishing Preserve and PAA board member.

Eckley said she attended the bidding meeting, but decided not to bid because of the uncertainty of the compliance costs.

"I would have bid if I could have bid competitively," she said.

For PCB compliance, Tellico will have to pay about $4,000 per year — like any other fish supplier would have — for having the fish tested by the state of Pennsylvania. That testing is required on five samples of eight fish each, according to Ort.

Economies of scale and ideal trout-growing conditions in western North Carolina are the main reasons for Tellico's competitive advantage, Ort said.

Tellico produces 2.2 million fingerling trout in their hatchery and 280,000 pounds of larger fish annually, some of which go for sport stockings like these in Pennsylvania.

Pritts said that there had been discussions with the PFBC prior to bidding about requiring a minimum of 20,000 trout being awarded to individual bidders.

But according to Rick Hoopes, Pennsylvania director of fisheries, a state purchasing rule disallows such a provision.

Hoopes noted that all bidders were notified equally of all the bidding rules and any changes that occurred.

Dennis Guise, PFBC executive director and chief counsel, agreed that there was no discrimination in the bidding process.

"Everybody was on a level playing field as far as submitting bids," he said.

Kane, of the Department General Services, said that bids from the Pennsylvania fisheries were " 'more than double, sometimes, the price of the bid that won."

The five-year contracting is a PFBC pilot program designed "to see if it is feasible for us to get fish from commercial sources to augment production," said Tom Cochran, PFBC biologist.

The PFBC has historically stocked about 5.2 million trout per year in Pennsylvania waters from its own hatcheries. That number is now about 4 million, according to Cochran.

Record Corn Forecast Up 1 Percent From Last Month

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Corn production is forecast at 10.3 billion bushels, up 1 percent from last month and 14 percent above 2002, according to the National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS).

Based on conditions as of November 1, yields are expected to average 143.2 bushels per acre, up 1.0 bushel from October and up 13.2 bushels from last year. If realized, both production and yield would be the largest on record. Both previous records were set in 1994.

Of the major producing States, Illinois and Ohio are expecting record yields. Yields are also forecast at record highs in 8 other States located mostly in the Southeast.

Soybean production is forecast at 2.45 billion bushels, down 1 percent from the October forecast and 11 percent below 2002. If realized, this would be the lowest production since 1996.

Based on conditions as of November 1, yields are expected to average 33.8 bushels per acre, down 0.2 bushel from October and down 4.2 bushels from 2002.

As harvest progressed, producers realized yield decreases from last month in South Dakota, upper Mississippi Valley, Great Lakes, and eastern Corn Belt. However, in Alabama, Arkansas, Kansas, Missouri, the Tennessee Valley, and along the Atlantic Coastal Plains, yield prospects increased from last month. Area for harvest is forecast at 72.5 million acres, unchanged from last month but up fractionally from 2002.

Bill Could Have Jeopardized Farmland Preservation

bill are pleased with the result.

"Grange is extremely pleased that there was an overwhelming vote to preserve farmland in Pennsylvania," said Brenda Shambaugh, legislative director for Pennsylvania State Grange. "The precedent set, once an agriculture restriction is in place, it remains intact. We (the Grange) would like to thank the legislators who voted to defeat this legislation and support agriculture in Pennsylvania."

However, Shambaugh notes that this bill could be reconsidered at a later date, because a reconsideration vote was taken and passed.

"Pennsylvania Farm Bureau appreciates the vote, but we also know the legislation may be brought back for more consideration soon," said Guy Donaldson, president of Pennsylvania Farm Bureau.

Donaldson noted, "We recognize that all members of the House are concerned about the preservation of farmland in the commonwealth. In this instance, some have been tempted to stray from their convictions. Because passage of the legislation would set harmful precedents for farmland preservation in Pennsylvania, we're hopeful that our lawmakers will ultimately give this legislation a proper burial."

The Pennsylvania Farm Bureau and Pennsylvania State Grange stepped up their grassroots efforts to defeat this bill in the days before its vote in the House.

Both organizations plan to monitor the status of the bill.

If passed, the bill could set precident not only for state-owned farmland, but also for Pennsylvania's farmland preservation programs.

"We think it is a dangerous precedent issue," said Donaldson. "If this happens, what does it do to our farmland preservation program?"

One component of the bill was the permitting the transfer of the agricultural restrictions on the 22 acres to a 46-acre site in Elk Township. Donaldson expressed concerns, that, if allowed, the bill could impact agricultural land preservation programs, opening the door for ag restriction movements.

"We are very pleased that the House has voted to maintain the integrity of the Ag Land Preservation program," said State Grange Master Betsy Huber. "Permanently preserved land should be just that, permanent, with no transfer of the easement permitted without a very important reason for the public good. Any weakening of the program would have a negative effect on future covenants."

Heidi Schellenger, executive director of Lancaster Farmland Trust (LFT), noted that LFT has been remaining aware of the bill's activity because of the impact it could have on easements.

"We need to maintain the sanctity of an easement," said Schellenger, stressing that an easement "is a perpetual promise" to protect farmland.

House Bill 66 was introduced at the beginning of the implementation of Warren County's comprehensive plan. The plan was developed to generate economic growth for the county.

According House Bill 66, Warren County is facing several economic challenges, such as an unemployment rate of 19 percent, decreasing county population, and a high percentage of county lands owned by the state or federal government, which limits the county tax base.

However, as the defeat of House Bill 66 will forbid the development of the agriculture lands, other options are available for developers in Warren County.

One option, a brownfield located to the west of Warren, is a possibility for development.

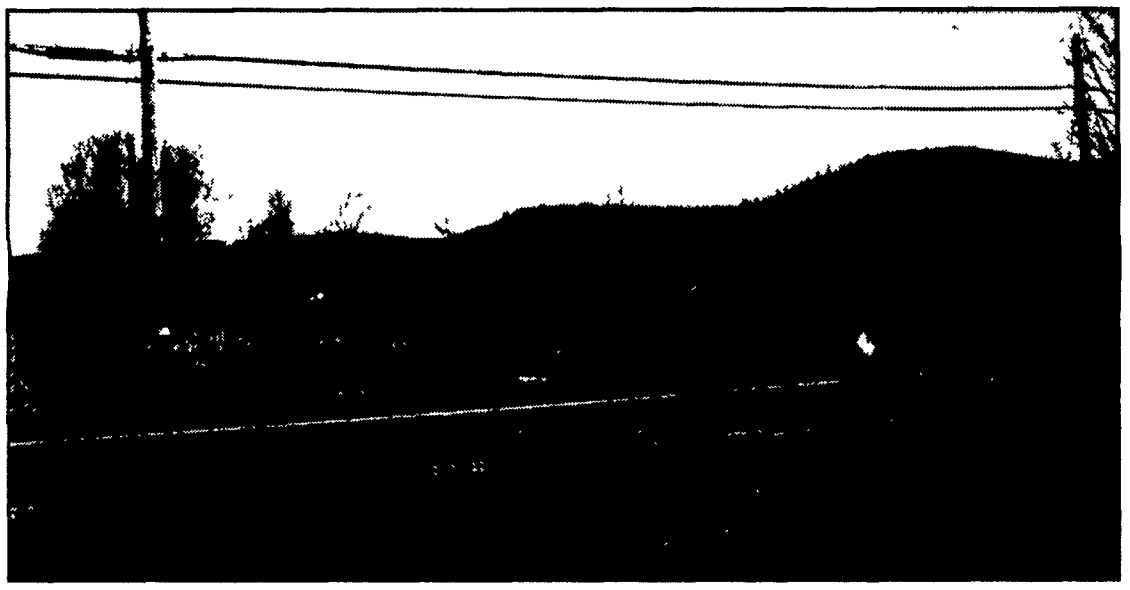
Formerly a manufacturing facility, located on Rt. 6, brownfield owner Cindy Morrison stresses her family is actively looking to revitalize it. Calling the brownfield "blighted," Morrison believes that a proposed Wal-Mart would help to revitalize the area.

Vacant since 1995, the property is home to three manufacturing plants. Working with Cambridges Services, Morrison is "expecting a contact from Wal-Mart," with the defeat of House Bill 66.

Warren County Commissioner-elect David Bauer said he does not know what the outgoing Warren County Board of Commissioners will do next in reaction to the bill's defeat. However, Bauer said, "No matter what happens, the new board has to handle the fallout."

Bauer noted that Warren County does not have a county farmland preservation program. He is confident that, as he and the new commissioner board takes office on Jan. 5, it will change.

"Warren County will be the next county to join the state farmland conservation program. It's about time we looked at how we use our natural resources."



This 22-acre property pictured from Jackson Run road in front of the Warren State Hospital Complex is at the heart of Pennsylvania's farmland preservation controversy. House Bill 66, which was defeated Tuesday in the House of Representatives, proposed to remove agriculture restrictions on the property for commercial development.

Nutrition And Management Keys To Health And Immune Response In Dairy Cattle

MOUNT JOY (Lancaster Co.) — "Designing an effective vaccination program is a little like building a roof," said Jeff Mamett, senior territory manager with Pfizer Animal Health. "You need to know the expected snow load and winds you're building against and understand the basic principles of how it has to work."

Recently, Mamett presented the notes and slides of Dr. Victor Cortese, well-known expert on animal immunology and vaccination, during an Agri-Basics customer seminar on the topic.

Herd health cannot be managed out of a bottle, said Mamett, stressing good management and nutrition as the absolute keys to health and immune response because of two basic principles that are non-negotiable and refuse to be ignored.

The first and foremost non-negotiable principle of immunology is very simple, but also critical to understand: "The clinical signs of disease occur in animals when the disease challenge they are exposed to surpasses the level of disease resistance they possess."

Pulling from his decades of experience as a professional farm manager and his 14 years with Pfizer, Mamett gave examples, including one about a dairyman who was vaccinating for coliform mastitis, and it wasn't working.

"When I got to the farm, I could see why," said Mamett. Barn hygiene was not being addressed. In effect, the disease challenge was not being reduced through management, so it was still greater than the level of disease resistance the cows were getting out of a bottle.

"The objective of a vaccination program, is to build resistance levels as high as you can, but to do that, you need an immune system that is capable of responding," Mamett explained the second non-negotiable principle. "Sick, stressed, or nutritionally deficient animals will not respond to vaccines because they do not have a fully functional immune system."

So how do vaccines work? Internally, it's a matter of building the defense based on getting a good look at the enemy's offense and being prepared with a strong team of primary and secondary defenders. "It takes three to four weeks to build that recognition, which consists of both responses — antibody (bloodstream) and T-cell (cellular)," Mamett described.

The recommendation to revaccinate in two to four weeks comes from the understanding that a second look at the attacker promotes a more rapid response. "They've seen it before so more soldiers are activated with the next dose," said Mamett. "We're tooled up with the first dose, now we can make these guys real fast."

Mamett pointed out that modified live vaccines produce a quicker onset of immunity than killed vaccines. The system is set up to differentiate the two. In general, killed vaccines activate the bloodstream police. This is why killed vaccines require a booster dose to increase the army because the initial dose doesn't achieve the memory response at the cell level.

The caution with MLV vaccines is they will cause a pregnant animal to lose her calf — with one exception. The exception is for pregnant animals that have already had the MLV vaccine within the previous 11 months. This is one reason why having a vaccination program is so important — to gain the advantages of MLV vaccines, and to effectively protect the herd across generations.

Mamett talked about the four main viruses: BVD, IBR, BRSV, and PI3. He stressed the underlying problem with BVD — the persistently infected (PI) animal. "The PI animal is an insidious problem for dairy producers, and it can get ugly in a big hurry. When an unborn calf is exposed to BVD between 70 and 120 days gestation, the calf may live, and if so will become a PI shedding BVD virus its entire life."

Mamett also talked about bacteria — especially Lepto, which is a big concern in the dairy business. "Here in the U.S., the most predominant strain of Lepto that causes the insidious economic losses in reproduction, is not contained in any of the 5-way vaccines," he said. "This strain uses the cow as a maintenance host for a month to a year, causing no signs of illness, and then affecting the reproductive system."

"The Lepto strains that use other animals as maintenance hosts (like dogs) will transmit to cattle and cause them to become sick," said Mamett. "We vaccinate for these Lepto strains because they can be transmitted to humans and they can make cows sick. But the Lepto that affects reproduction and uses the cow as a host, is the moving target we really need to address because of the economic cost." Pfizer makes the only vaccine (Spirovac) available for this hardjo-bovis strain.

Vaccination protocols are not one-size-fits-all. The idea behind a herd vaccination program is to give vaccinations when the animal's immune system is most capable of responding and to provide protection for the big economic diseases.

Mamett urged producers to consult with their veterinarians to develop a program that fits their own herd management systems and the challenges on their own farms.

He strongly advised using an intranasal vaccine for newborns and new arrivals because the immediate release of interferon provides a temporary umbrella until vaccines given to older animals or colostrum antibodies consumed by newborns, are up to speed.

Critical Discussions, Well-Known Speakers Highlight Upcoming Cattle Convention

DENVER, Colo. — A wide range of topics and interests will be on the table when cattle producers meet Jan. 28-31 in Phoenix, Ariz., for the 2004 Cattle Industry Annual Convention and Trade Show. The event includes meetings of the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA), the Cattlemen's Beef Promotion and Research Board, the American National CattleWomen, Inc., Cattle-Fax, and the National Cattlemen's Foundation.

Attendees will make critical decisions on the behalf of their industry at the four-day event.

Joint industry committees discussing beef checkoff issues and programs will meet Friday, Jan. 30. At those meetings, results of checkoff-funded strategies and tactics for the first three months of fiscal year 2004 will be presented and reviewed.

NCBA policy committees will meet Friday, as well. At those meetings, NCBA affiliates will bring policy from their states and members for discussion, deliberation and adoption.

The Cattle-Fax Outlook Seminar is scheduled for Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 28. This session, will cover issues of critical importance to cattle producers and feeders.

The Board of Directors meetings for the Cattlemen's Beef Board and the National Cattlemen's Beef Association are Saturday morning, Jan. 31. Awards honoring NCBA Top Hand Members, the National Cattlemen's Foundation Beef Industry Scholarship Award winner, National Collegiate Beef Quiz Bowl winners and others will be presented at a luncheon that day.

Advance registration for the event ends Jan. 2. For more information, contact the NCBA Convention and Meetings Department at (303) 694-0305.

Center Preserves Virginia's Agriculture, Wildlife Legacy

GAY BROWNLEE
Virginia Correspondent

HARRISONBURG, Va. — On Monday, Nov. 17, the Virginia Agriculture and Nature Center Foundation (a nonprofit organization), kicked off its Phase One campaign to gain financial partners with a "down on the farm" country supper at the Traditions Restaurant.

The perpetual mission of the Virginia Agriculture and Nature Center will be to "help youth and adults develop a better understanding and appreciation of agriculture."

Within its stated mission, the foundation is aiming to arm individuals who have limited knowledge of agriculture, with a growing recognition of and appreciation for the profound impact agriculture has on society.

In the startup phase, the emphasis will primarily be livestock, poultry, wildlife and conservation. Eventually field, crop and horticulture demonstrations will be added, as well as a greenhouse, a nature trail, and a primitive camping area.

A farm-house style restaurant designed to reflect a sense of being at Grandmas house, and a gift shop, are also in the works.

Susan Allen, foundations honorary chairperson, was the featured speaker. Allen is known to Virginians as Sen. George Allens wife. From 1994-1998, while her husband was governor, she was the states First Lady.

Allen was upbeat with an energizing attitude. She promotes her home state wherever she goes, including Asia, Europe, Egypt, and Israel.

She was once a cheerleader, Allen said of herself, adding, "Thats what I can do — yell."

The concept of developing an enduring center that maintains the past, yet stays abreast with the changing facets of agriculture in order to educate citizens of all ages, Allen likened to an observation Oliver Wendell Holmes made about a mans mind. Once it is stretched to new dimensions, it will never go back to its original idea.

"Fundraising is hardest part," Allen said. "You have to stretch a new idea into a wonderful reality."

Hobey Bauhan, president of the Virginia Poultry Federation and master of ceremonies, said, "The Virginia Agriculture and Nature Center, planned for Rockingham County "Virginias largest agricultural producing county and the turkey capital — holds much promise as a vitally needed opportunity to educate people about modern agriculture and the role it plays in feeding the world, and doing so in an ecologically sustainable manner."

Rockingham County is virtually the bulls-eye of Virginia agriculture, especially with regard to poultry and dairy production. It generates $438 million in cash receipts, according to the Farm Bureau Federation reports.

"The center will also enhance tourism in the Shenandoah Valley and Virginia," Bauhan said.

Situated at 2490 Saddle Trail, McGaheysville, the Virginia Agriculture and Nature Center is in the shadow of the Massanutten Resort that sits atop the Massanutten Mountain range in the George Washington National Forest.

From previous eras, Civil War relics and arrowheads surfaced on the land, according to information from Eugenia Nelson, the foundations secretary-treasurer.

Nelson reported that the first phase will see the development of 12-15 acres and farm buildings — barn and animals sheds. They will be restored to look as they did in the last century, when it was a 200-acre mountain farm in the early 1900s. The center project, however, involves the 43 acres that later became a commercial beef and poultry operation for two educators.

Planners recognize the integral value of intertwining fun with facts. So while the entire family is absorbing the reasons why agriculture was, is, and always will be life-sustaining, they will be entertained and amused participants. They will have an opportunity to get "up close and personal" with livestock species and small animals.

Just try milking a cow by hand, or gathering delicate fresh eggs, for instance. Or touch the furry animals, pet or brush their coats.

Besides entry gates, biosecurity measures prior to and following any contact with the animals will include disinfecting hands at dispensers similar to those in hospitals, and passing through a foot bath that allows ones shoes to be cleaned.

Among the species at the center:

• Hogs — no males, but four sows of different breeds and in various stages of gestation and farrowing. Piglets will be kept with their mothers until they are weaned.

• Goats — guests will be able to milk a pair of female goats of different breeds and two other breeds will represent meat goats.

• Sheep — six breeds will show how the contribution of sheep to society is primarily wool and meat.

• Rabbits — their value as fur producers and meat animals.

• Poultry — six to 12 laying hens and broilers of varying ages. Also turkey poults and pullets.

• Dairy — during the calving season — March to November — cows will be at the center. A big black and white Holstein milked with automatic equipment will exhibit the modern methods, but confident visitors may try their skill at extracting milk by hand from the more sedate Jersey or Guernsey cow.

• Beef — two breeds of beef cows will be represented and alternative animals will include emu, llama, and beefalo.

There will be an emphasis on the environment, water, crops and wildlife.

In the off-season, staff will conduct visitations to nursing homes, civic organizations and schools, taking smaller species. The petting zoo and walking trail will be closed in the off-season from November to March.

Guest David Liskey, president of the Spotswood FFA, announced the Spotswood Chapter is constructing a progress sign for the foundation.

"We are glad to come and help sponsor this event," he said. "We would like to get more involved in the community."

Field Day Examines How To Breed A Top Dairy Herd

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — More than 120 farmers attended the "Breeding for a Top Dairy Herd" Field Day on Nov. 19 at Mar-R farms, the home of Marvin and Ruth Stoltzfus and their six children. The program was provided by Penn State Cooperative Extension in Lancaster County.

The Stoltzfus family milks 50 cows, with the distinction of holding one of the highest rolling herd averages in Lancaster County. The farm's November test showed 33,000 pounds of milk, with 1,213 pounds of butterfat and 947 pounds of protein.

When asked the secret of the farm's success, Stoltzfus gives credit to plenty of high quality forages. He keeps fresh feed in front of the cows at all times, feeding 6-8 times each day. The farm milks the cows on a 10-hour schedule. By including one 8-hour interval weekly, they can keep the same milking time on a given day of the week during the year. All of the milking is done by the family.

In selecting bulls, Stoltzfus selects primarily on TPI and lifetime net merit, while keeping strength in the dairy herd. He prefers to use bulls at least + .00 on strength, and emphasizes the importance of longevity in the herd.

Several topics were covered in the program, including "Choosing Bulls for Your Dairy Herd," "Type and Profitability," and "Systematic AI Programs." Speakers included Dr. Stephen Foulke of Ag Vet Associates in Manheim, Dr. Barry Harris of Smoketown Veterinarians, Dr. Chad Dechow from Penn State, Douglas Speicher from Genex/CRI, and Jeff Myers and Beth Grove of Penn State Cooperative Extension.

Dechow presented a talk on "Crossbreeding in the Dairy Herd." He explained reasons why dairy producers would consider crossbreeding, including the possibility of increased fertility or longevity in a herd. Dechow also discussed the concept of "heterosis" or the additional production yield (about 5 percent) expected in a cross between two distinct breeds. He also spoke about some foreign breeds which may be considered in an effective crossbreeding scheme, including the Scandinavian Red.

After the morning's program, attendees were treated to a barbeque chicken meal and tour of the facilities.

Penn State Pesticide Education Garners National Recognition

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Penn State's Pesticide Education Program recently was one of four such state programs to be recognized as models by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

In its publication, "Helping People Use Pesticides Safely," USDA's Cooperative State Research, Education, and Extension Service highlighted the pesticide safety education programs at Penn State, Purdue University, North Carolina State University and Washington State University, saying that the programs "demonstrate the commitment to excellence shared by most pesticide safety education programs."

Nationally, pesticide safety education training is coordinated by USDA-CSREES at land-grant universities. Funding is provided by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, state governments and other sources.

Led by John Ayers, professor of plant pathology, the Penn State program was cited for making "great strides in addressing urban concerns about pesticide issues." The publication noted the program's outreach initiatives and its leadership of Penn State's West Nile Virus educational efforts.

The program also was lauded for producing a series of consumer fact sheets, and for creating educational materials aimed at children — including a computer-based game — featuring the cartoon character, D.B. Pest. Kerry Richards, manager of the program's Pest Management Information Center, developed D.B. Pest to teach such concepts as integrated pest management, alternatives to pesticide use and safe use of pesticides when necessary.

In 2002, Penn State's Pesticide Education Program trained more than 5,200 new pesticide applicators and recertified another 25,600. In addition, the program reached more than 45,000 people through educational sessions for consumer groups, 4-H youth, school children, educators, Master Gardeners and others.

Presentation On Scrapie Control Available

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. — A PowerPoint presentation that explains how and when producers can use genetics to control scrapie is now available and was introduced at the American Veterinary Medical Association's Annual Convention in July. The title of the presentation is "Genotyping — A new Tool for Producers."

"This presentation has been designed for direct use by producers or by veterinarians, professors, extension agents, youth program leaders, and others who may be addressing producer groups," explains Dr. Cindy Wolf, a small ruminant specialist at the University of Minnesota and Chair of the National Institute for Animal Agriculture's (NIAA) Sheep Health Committee.

The presentation has an extensive notes section, a glossary and an appendix that were developed to assist the presenter with their presentation.

The presentation is available for viewing or downloading at www.animalagriculture.org/scrapie, or as a compact disc (CD) through NIAA.

Lehigh County Farm Bureau Recognized

NEW TRIPOLI (Lehigh Co.) — Lehigh County Farm Bureau received the coveted "All Star" award for 2003 in Hershey at the 2003 Pennsylvania Farm Bureau Convention. The "All Star" award is the most prestigious award bestowed by the state association. The award honors the county farm bureau that achieves the highest score in the Recognition and Awards Program. Brian Dietrich of New Tripoli, president of the county for 2003, accepted the award from Guy Donaldson, state bureau president. This marks the third year in a row that Lehigh County received the honor.

Four primary program areas make up the structure and purpose of the organization. They are Member Relations, Member Services, Governmental Relations, and Agriculture Commodities. The business of the group is vested in a thirteen-person board of directors and membership is the lifeblood of the group. The award was based on an all-time high of 809 families. This figure represents 188 new members, which were recruited in 2003. Bill Boyd, Mertztown, and Ray Fluck, New Tripoli, served as Membership Chairman for the 2003 year.

The governmental relations cabinet member is Arland Schantz, Zionsville. Local, state, and federal legislative issues fall under this category. Some of the issues worked on by Lehigh County this year included elimination of the inheritance tax, expansion of the use of renewable fuels, property tax reform, and the high cost of health care. Nine policies were forwarded to the state for inclusion in the state program.

The Member Relations segment is chaired by Bill Boyd, Mertztown. Membership, Publications, Promotion and Ag Education, Women's Committee and Young Farmer and Rancher committees are all covered under this area. Karen Boyd, Mertztown, served as the Women's Committee Chairman. Her 12-member committee is the most active in the organization. Their activities include the Spring Mini-Farm Show, Farm Wife Dinner, Farm Safety Day Camp, and various displays at Fairs.

The Promotion and Education Committee was chaired by Annette Pattishall, New Tripoli. She coordinates the Ag in the Classroom contribution, which gives local teachers the opportunity to attend a one-week workshop at Penn State University. Funds generated by the Women's Committee also support this great cause.

The Young Farmer and Rancher Committee this year was coordinated by Mike Fink, Germansville. Activities included Discussion Meet participation and the Achievement Award Contest.

Communication with the membership has helped the organization to achieve this award. A yearly directory, as well as a bimonthly newsletter, keeps everyone informed. Beverly Gruber, New Tripoli, Secretary and Newsletter Editor, is responsible to see that the entire membership is aware of the group's issues and happenings.

The Member Service area of the association was chaired in 2003 by John Berry, Emmaus. Services offered and products purchased by the membership came from Safemark Products, Farm Management Services, Nationwide Insurance, Blue Cross, as well as specific contract services. A special insurance meeting was held in Lehigh County in September to benefit the membership.

The final area is the Agriculture Commodities. Mike Fink, Germansville, chaired this area. Eleven of the primary commodities in the county have committees. These include corn and small grains, dairy, fruit and vegetables including potatoes, livestock, poultry, forestry, greenhouse/nursery, and others which includes hay and wine. The committee chairmen from the commodities made presentations at board meetings throughout the 2003 year.

Lehigh County also has five very active advisory councils. These councils meet each month and research a topic of interest to the Ag community. The Board roster is completed with an additional four members, Sterling Raber, Orefield; Dick Bleiler, New Tripoli; Diane Schlauch, Slatington; and Larry Bachman, New Tripoli.

A total of 20 members attended the award ceremony in Hershey. In addition to the "All Star" award, the county was also recognized for winning 14 program awards.

Schnecksville Woman Appointed To National Agricultural Committee

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Andrea Semmel of Schnecksville, Lehigh County was recently appointed by American Farm Bureau (AFBF) President Bob Stallman, to a brand new AFBF committee. The two-year project, called Making American Agriculture Productive and Profitable (MAAPP), gets under way in December. The group was created to study issues that could affect the future of American agriculture and develop policy options to help Farm Bureau members become more productive and profitable for years to come.

Semmel is one of 23 farmers and Farm Bureau leaders from around the country who will collect and consider information from within and outside Farm Bureau. The information will be used to develop policy options for consideration by the AFBF voting delegates and board of directors.

Each committee member was nominated by their state Farm Bureau president and represents the diversity of agricultural commodities produced as well as all regions of the country.

Semmel is involved in all aspects of running her familys 200 acre dairy farm, Excelsior Farm. They have 225 registered Holsteins and 10 registered Brown Swiss. She is past chair of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureaus Young Farmer and Rancher Committee and is currently an ex-officio member.

She is active in her county Farm Bureau and is a member of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureaus Speakers Bureau. She is the auditor for North Whitehall Township, a member of the Lehigh County Holstein Club, and a member of Pennsylvania Ag Republicans. Semmel enjoys showing cows at the Allentown Fair.

Penn State Aids In Effort To Stop Spread Of Rabies

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The costs of dealing with rabies are extremely high, and that's why a wildlife expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences is working with the U.S. Department of Agriculture and other agencies to stop rabies from moving west out of Pennsylvania.

"Ohio doesn't have much raccoon rabies — it just has not gotten there yet," explains Gary San Julian, professor of wildlife resources. "Rabies was brought to Pennsylvania from the South. The costs involved when a person is bitten are high — rabies is a massive problem, so it's critical to try to stop it here."

The USDA dropped fish meal pellets containing a raccoon rabies vaccine in September from low-flying aircraft in the less densely populated areas of Mercer, Lawrence, Beaver, Washington and Greene counties, and in parts of Erie, Crawford, Venango, Butler, Allegheny, Fayette and Westmoreland counties.

The baited zone extended approximately 60 miles into Pennsylvania and officials say the drops will move eastward in future years as funding permits. The vaccine contains only a small, non-infective portion of the rabies virus that cannot cause rabies. When a raccoon punctures the sealed plastic package, the vaccine is released into its mouth.

A number of agencies are participating in the effort to stop rabies from spreading west from Pennsylvania, including the United States Department of Agriculture, Pennsylvania Department of Health, Allegheny County Department of Health, Erie County Department of Health, Pennsylvania Game Commission and Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. Penn State is part of the Rabies Task Force and is doing research on rabies in Pennsylvania for the USDA.

"This is the second year for dropping raccoon baits and the program is critical for helping to control the spread of rabies," says San Julian. "It's a serious concern here in Pennsylvania. This year, by the end of September, according to the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, a total of 321 confirmed cases of animal rabies have been reported. Of this number, 188 were raccoons."

Mid-Atlantic Fruit, Vegetable Convention Theme: 'Charting Your Course For 2004'

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Fruit and vegetable growers from throughout the Mid-Atlantic region and beyond will be gathering here at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center Jan. 27-29 for the 2004 Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention.

About 2,000 persons are expected for the annual event that has become recognized as one of the premier fruit and vegetable grower meetings in the Northeast. The theme for this year's event is "Charting Your Course for 2004."

The convention has been jointly sponsored by the State Horticultural Association of Pennsylvania, the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association, the Maryland State Horticultural Society, and the New Jersey State Horticultural Society for the past 26 years. The Pennsylvania State University, University of Maryland, and Rutgers University Cooperative Extensions all assist in organizing the educational sessions as well.

The Great American Hall at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center will host the Trade Show with more than 130 exhibitors. Specialized horticultural equipment, farm market merchandise, and packaging, will all be on display along with inf,rmation on the latest seed varieties, fruit varieties, pesticides, and other supplies and services for the commercial grower.

Six or more concurrent educational sessions will be offered on all three days of the convention. The following full-day sessions are planned for the first day: tree fruits, season extension technology, basic vegetable production school, and wine grapes. Half-day sessions on wholesale marketing, peaches, labor and legal issues, beans, vine crops, asparagus, and peppers will be offered.

On the second day, full-day sessions on peaches, tree fruits, direct marketing, water use issues, tomatoes (fresh market and processing), and potatoes will be featured. Also scheduled are half-day sessions on small fruit and pumpkins.

The convention will close on the third day with full-day sessions on tree fruits, small fruit, sweet corn, bedding plants, and cut flowers. Half-day sessions on specialty vegetables and value-added vegetables will also be offered.

Many pesticide applicator update training credits are available to growers attending the sessions. The program covers nearly every aspect of fruit, vegetable, potato, wine grape, and small fruit production. Commercial growers should not pass up this educational opportunity.

On Jan. 27, fruit and vegetable growers will be treated to a reception followed by the annual Fruit and Vegetable Growers Dinner. The dinner will include awards, recognitions, and entertainment. On Jan. 28, the Pennsylvania Apple Marketing Board and the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association will each sponsor evening receptions for growers. The processing tomato growers with the highest yields for the 2003 season will be honored at the annual Tomato Awards Luncheon Jan. 28.

For more information on the fruit program and registration, contact the following:

• Maureen Irvin, State Horticultural Association of Pennsylvania, (717) 677-4184 or www.shaponline.org.

• William Tietjen, (908) 475-6505 or Jerome Frecon, (856) 307-6450, New Jersey State Horticultural Society or http://gloucester.rce.rutgers.edu.

For more information on the vegetable, potato, or greenhouse ornamental program and registration, contact William Troxell, Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association, (717) 694-3596 or www.pvga.org.

Persons registered for either the fruit or vegetable program can attend all the sessions offered (fruit, vegetable, and small fruit sessions) plus the trade show. Registration either through the mail or at the door is required to attend both the trade show and educational sessions.

Five Days Of Angus Events At 2004 National Western

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — Angus enthusiasts from across the country will gather for the 2004 National Western Stock Show's Angus activities in Denver, Colo. Five days of events are planned and include the 2004 Super Point Roll of Victory (ROV) and National Angus Show, junior heifer show, pen and carload show and the National Western Angus Bull Sale. Angus breeders from around the globe, as well as some of the top Angus cattle from the United States, will be in Denver.

The activities begin with the junior heifer show at 3 p.m., Tuesday, January 13, in the Stadium Arena. Alan Miller, LeRoy, Ill., will evaluate the juniors' Angus females.

The female portion of the Super Point ROV and National Angus Show will begin at 8 a.m., Wednesday, January 14, in the Stadium Arena. Jack Ward, Plattsburg, Mo., will judge the National Show.

An Angus "Listening Post" will be open for visitors Wednesday through Saturday during the Angus events in Denver. Association members and commercial cattle producers are encouraged to stop by the Angus tent in the yards to talk about current beef industry issues, visit with Association staff, ask questions and exchange ideas.

The National Western Angus Bull Sale highlights the events on Thursday, Jan. 15. The bull sale show begins at 8 a.m. in the Stadium Arena. Five judges will evaluate the 54 bulls and select division and grand champions. Judges include Donald Bloom, Westville, Ind.; Jeff Gooden, Iberia, Mo.; Bruce Kiesewetter, Letts, Iowa; Lorna Pelton, College Station, Texas; and Kevin Yon, Ridge Spring, S.C. The sale begins at 2 p.m. in the Beef Palace Auction Arena.

The sale of the 2004 Angus Foundation Heifer Package will precede the bull sale. Beartooh Ranch, Columbus, Mont., is donating BT Everelda Entense 51N to headline this year's package, which benefits youth, education and research projects of the breed.

An Angus reception will wrap up Thursday's activities. The reception is set from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., at the Denver Marriott City Center, located downtown.

The Super Point ROV and National Angus Show resumes Friday, Jan. 16, with the bull show. Ward will again serve as the judge, beginning at 8 a.m. in the Stadium Arena. The Foundation Female Sale, sponsored by the Colorado Angus Association, will begin at 3 p.m. at the Livestock Auction Arena in the yards.

Angus activities conclude on Saturday, Jan. 17, with the pen and carload shows in the yards. The event begins at 9 a.m. in the Livestock Center Auction Arena. Henry Bergfeld, Summitville, Ohio; Dick Burns, Kickapoo, Ill.; and Jim Pipkin, Republic, Mo., will officiate the group competitions.

This highly versatile equipment can be used to secure a cow safely and efficiently for foot care or veterinary services.

Side panels and gates easily replace hoof care accessories to create a vet chute where almost any common vet procedure can be performed.

Standard hoof care attachments include; a rear splatter board, rear foot winch, two front foot winches and a full width belly band and winch to lift the animals weight off their feet. All winches have heavy duty friction brakes providing constant, positive holding action.

ALL STEEL PARTS ARE POWDER COATED USING THE PBZ FIVE-STEP PROCESS.

Once in the chute with the belly band winched into working position, the cow is safely secured for foot treatment.

Sheep Milk Cheese Anyone?

Here, The Shepherd Becomes The Dairyman

OLDWICK, N.J. — Eran Wajswol might be running a niche enterprise, but that doesn't mean it's easy keeping up with demand.

"Anybody who tastes it is my customer," Wajswol said of his specialty "cave-ripened" cheese made from sheep's milk.

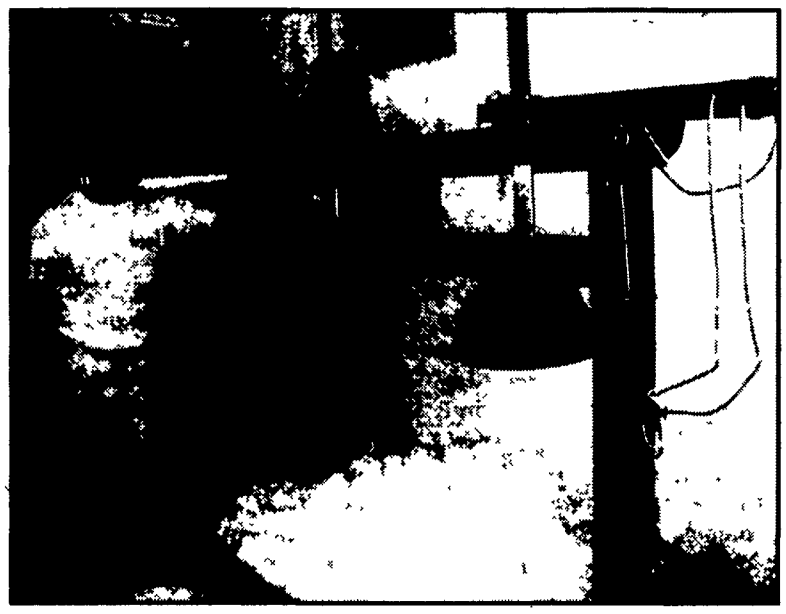
Wajswol manages a flock of 60 East Friesian milking ewes on his 20-acre farm here in northern New Jersey. The milk is used to produce about 4,000 pounds worth of hard, ripened cheese wheels per year, plus some soft brie-style cheeses.

Wajswol, who has been milking sheep for about seven years, calls the 60-ewe setup a testing ground for a much larger operation he hopes to have up and running by next year. That facility, situated on a 120-acre farm, will feature a 36-unit carousel milking parlor and capacity to eventually milk about 700 ewes.

The art of cheesemaking takes a lot of time to learn, according to Wajswol. That's why he started out with a modestly sized operation.

"The small facility was built to make mistakes on a small scale," he said. "It takes 10 years to make a good cheesemaker . . . 20 years to make a world-class cheesemaker."

Wajswol's goal is to be numbered among the world's "international-quality" cheesemakers. To learn his craft, he has made a number of trips to Europe's great cheesemaking countries, where sheep dairying is more commonplace, including France, Italy, and Spain.



Wajswol's cheese press is based on a type of press that has been used in Europe for centuries.

Wajswol built this portable milking parlor for his East Friesian ewes.

"There really is no sheep milking heritage in this country to learn from," he said.

In his most recent trip this past July, Wajswol spent about a month living among the Basque people of southern Spain, studying their sheep milk cheese-making methods.

Wajswol, a former mechanical engineer and builder, constructed a 16-foot deep "cave" on his farm to recreate the ideal conditions for ripening his cheeses.

In Europe, cheese-ripening caves are traditionally situated on hillsides. But without an adequate hill on his farm, Wajswol dug the cave essentially straight down into the ground.

Roughly the size of a kitchen, the cave is walled with concrete and equipped with iron spiral stairs. A small building above ground level shelters the entranceway to the cave.

With the aid of a heater and air conditioner for the coldest and hottest months, respectively, and by keeping standing water on the floor, temperatures and humidity can be maintained at optimum conditions (about 55 degrees Farenheit and 90 percent relative humidity) for the molds that help impart the unique flavor for each style of cheese.

Most of Wajswol's hard cheeses are ripened for 60 days. He is also experimenting with aging some for as long as two years. But it's hard to set cheese aside for the longer aging process when customers are constantly asking for it.

"They told me they will buy everything in my cave," he said. "I say 'no' more than I say 'yes.'"

Wajswol wholesales about 70 percent of his products, labeled Farmersville Cheeses.

Much of his cheese goes to New York, Philadelphia, and urban centers in New Jersey, and some as far away as San Francisco, Calif. He retails at farmers' markets as well. The cheeses sell for $15 to $20 a pound.

Prior to going to the cave for aging, the cheese wheels are formed by a process for which there is no set recipe, Wajswol said.

are added to the milk in a temperature-controlled "traditional Dutch vat." Each batch that is made requires constant attention. Wajswol said that his hand is in the vat "feeling the curd" for about three hours out of the five-hour process.

When he determines that the curd consistency is just right, the cheese is placed in special plastic molds and whey is squeezed from it in a wooden cheese press similar to that used for centuries in Europe. This is also time-consuming, with the cheese wheels needing to be turned every 20 minutes through the four-hour process.

Once in the cave, the cheese wheels need close monitoring and must be turned and wiped daily.

Every step along the way requires sharp attention to the quality of the work in progress, Wajswol noted.

"This cheese needs company when its being made," he said. "There's no 'automatic.' Automatic doesn't make great cheese."

Another challenging aspect of sheep dairying is care of the ewes themselves.

Wajswol allows the sheep to graze as much as possible and doesn't administer wormers or other medications while the ewes are milking from April to November.

But East Friesian sheep have their share of troubles, according to Wajswol. These include lambing difficulties and a tendencies toward ailments such as pneumonia.

Wajswol uses estrus synchronization and artificial insemination to have the ewes lamb in April. Lambing season is hectic because of the number of ewes that need assistance.

"We don't sleep in April," he said.

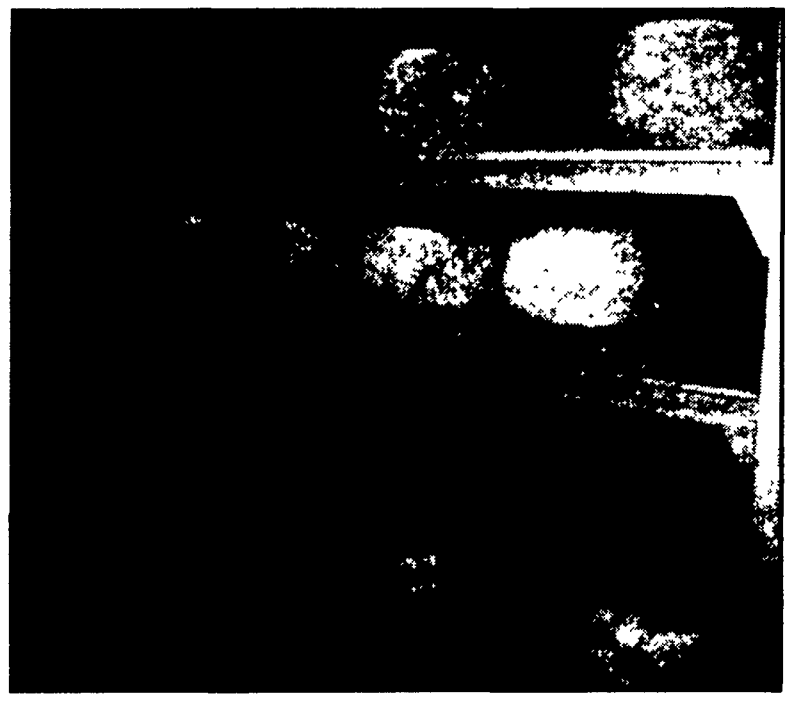
The flock is milked in a portable parlor that Wajswol built himself, based on a Swiss design.

Average milk production for East Friesians is 5 to 6 pounds per day.

Sheep milk is extraordinarily rich in solids — up to 10 percent protein and 7 percent butterfat, according to Wajswol. It is naturally homogenized and yields about one pound of cheese for seven pounds of milk, compared to the ratio of about 1:10 for cows milk.

Wajswol's wife Debra and children Chelsea, 13, and Ethan, 11, help with the milking and other jobs on the dairy, including the important job of taste-testing cheeses.

Wajswol said that a big investment is needed to make good quality cheese. His new large-scale operation, which will include a cave built into a hillside, a retail store, and accomodations for tourists to watch sheep-milking and cheesemaking, will cost about $2 million.



Cheese wheels ripen in Wajswol's cave.

Chesapeake's Health Takes Turn For Worse

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Government's failure to stem the enormous flow of nitrogen and phosphorus pollution into the Chesapeake Bay is the most important factor in the decline in the bay's health this year, according to the Chesapeake Bay Foundation's (CBF) sixth annual "State of the Bay Report."

The report finds that on a scale of 0 to 100 (100 reflecting the pristine Bay Captain John Smith described in the 1600s), the Bay's health rates a 27, down one pint from 2002's rating.

Today's report comes less than one month before the 20th anniversary of the Chesapeake clean-up program, an event that will be marked on Dec. 9 by the region's top elected and appointed officials.

"It is a tragedy that instead of celebrating the 20th anniversary of the Chesapeake Bay Program this year with progress toward a restored Bay, we must report that the Bay has taken a turn for the worse," CBF President William C. Baker said. "Three and a half years after making the commitment to a restored Bay by 2010, the states and federal government have yet to implement any decisive actions that will, in fact, begin to reduce nitrogen and phosphorus pollution, the prime cause of the bay's illness."

The "State of the Bay Report" which CBF issues for the first time in 1998, is a comprehensive measure of the bay's health. For the report, CBF analyzes 13 indicators: oysters, shad, underwater grasses, wetlands, forested buffers, toxics, water clarity, dissolved oxygen, crabs, striped bass (rockfish), resource lands, phosphorus, and nitrogen. CBF scientists compiled and examined the best available historical and up-to-date information for each indicator and assigned it an index number.

This year's decline was the result of increased nitrogen and phosphorus pollution and the related increases in "dead zones" (areas of the Bay and its tributaries where oxygen levels are too low to sustain life), as well as decreases in water clarity.

Chesapeake scientists have described precisely the series of actions that will be necessary to improve water quality consistent with the requirements of the federal Clean Water Act. Yet, these actions have not been implemented by the region's governments. The Clean Water Act requires that all permits for sewage treatment plants, industries, large animal operations, and municipal stormwater be sufficiently stringent to protect water quality.

"The states and EPA simply are not enforcing the law," Baker said. "There are thousands of permits issued in the watershed, and I can count on one hand the number that have both nitrogen and phosphorus restrictions."

Other factors contributing to the decline were state budget problems that have slowed land preservation efforts and the continued dangerously low levels of the blue crab population.

Improvements were seen this year in forest buffer restoration as a result of federal/state/private partnerships and shad population increases that have been observed in all the major tributaries.

Hereford Youth Gather In Kansas City For PRIDE Convention

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Hereford youth from across the nation gathered in Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 24-26, to celebrate "Going Above and Beyond with Herefords" at the 2003 PRIDE Convention.

The Program for Reaching Individuals Determined to Excel (PRIDE) featured many outstanding speakers and leadership driven workshops.

Other weekend highlights included seminars focusing on leadership, teamwork, livestock judging, and web marketing. PRIDE delegates also enjoyed tours of two of Kansas City's most exciting landmarks, The Kansas City Board of Trade and Science City/Union Station.

The brightest and best youth the Hereford breed has to offer kicked off PRIDE by participating in the skill related contests. After contests wrapped-up and the tour of Kansas City attractions, Barrett Keene, Gainsville, Fla., delivered the address.

Opening ceremonies followed with enthusiastic state cheers that led to the National Junior Hereford Association (NJHA) Board of Director skit that featured the entire NJHA board. The skit was derived based on the Star Trek theme and how the voyage was to save the Hereford breed and to capitalize on the breed's strengths.

Saturday, Angie Stump-Denton, Web Marketing Director for the Angus Journal, St. Joseph, Mo., spoke about managing a complete web-marketing program to help sell one's product and service. The program continued with the convention delegation moving into various workshops. Dr. Dan Moser, Kansas State University, Manhattan, Kan., covered what the Hereford breeds needs to focus on to help take back its market share. Jay Carlson, Beef Magazine, Overland Park, Kan., addressed what Hereford juniors need to do as individuals and as a group to promote Herefords.

NJHA board members who also compete on collegiate livestock and meats judging teams shared their knowledge and experience with the delegates, presenting a workshop on cattle evaluation and reasons.

The awards luncheon took place at Kansas City's Union Station and the Hereford House catered the meal. The American Royal Ambassadors, "The Royal Six," gave an overview of their position with the American Royal and invited any young person in attendance to consider applying for the ambassador position. The luncheon concluded with the recognition of several outstanding juniors and state junior organizations.

New Resource Helps Farmers Forge Success, Sustainability

BELTSVILLE, Md. — Responding to keen interest from farmers and ranchers in developing new production and marketing alternatives, the Sustainable Agriculture Network (SAN) recently released a user-friendly publication to help producers develop goal-oriented business plans for farms and rural businesses. Published in collaboration with the Minnesota Institute for Sustainable Agriculture, the publication, called Building a Sustainable Business, brings the business planning process alive and transforms farm-grown inspirations into profitable enterprises.

Building a Sustainable Business: A Guide to Developing a Business Plan for Farms and Rural Businesses includes blank worksheets and step-by-step strategies for developing a detailed, lender-ready business plan to take advantage of new opportunities, such as:

- Organic Farming
- On-farm Processing
- Direct Marketing
- Agri-tourism
- Alternative Crops
- Adding Value

"This guide is a terrific resource for producers seeking to develop a sound plan for a sustainable agricultural business," said Damona Doye, extension economist, Oklahoma State University. "It is reader-friendly and thought-provoking."

The 280-page publication follows farmers Dave and Florence Minar through a major transition on their Minnesota dairy farm. The experiences of the Minars and five other farm families lend a real-life perspective, illustrating how they research alternatives, determined potential markets, and evaluated financing options.

To order Building a Sustainable Business, send $14 plus $3.95 for shipping/handling to Sustainable Agriculture Publications, 210 Hills Building, University of Vermont, Burlington, VT 05405-0082. Credit card and discounted volume orders may be placed by calling (802) 656-0484. Preview the publication online at www.sare.org/publications.

Free New Publication On Local Food

FAYETTEVILLE, Ariz. — "Bringing Local Food to Local People" is a new publication offered by Appropriate Technology Transfer for Rural Areas (ATTRA), the sustainable agriculture information service of the National Center for Appropriate Technology (NCAT).

The new release highlights and discusses the advantages and obstacles of marketing directly from farms to institutions, such as colleges and schools. It contains a spreadsheet that provides contact information for about 40 farm-to-institution projects, including the state, name, position, address, e-mail, and phone number of contact persons, as well as a brief description of the projects.

This and more than 230 other ATTRA publications are available free to farmers, ranchers, extension agents, market gardeners, and others engaged in commercial agriculture by calling (800) 346-9140. The publications may also be downloaded from the ATTRA Web site, http://www.attra.ncat.org.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

cattle with Canada remains in effect and California's growth rate in milk output remains stunted. This will slow the drop in cheese prices as inventories are reduced. Butter prices, however, still have room to drop as inventories are higher than normal. Thus, producers should look for opportunities to lock in the first two quarters of 2004.

As of Friday, the Chicago Mercantile Exchange futures for the first two quarters of 2004 were above the 5-year average prices, particularly for the second quarter (up $0.28 per CWT). I would certainly consider locking in some milk for these prices, but would also advise waiting until Dec. 4 to get the Dairy Products report. That will allow us to better measure commercial disappearance of butter and American cheese through October.

Laura Mihm Earns Junior Bronze Award

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — Laura Mihm, Woodbine, Md., has qualified for the Bronze Award of the National Junior Angus Association, James Fisher, director of activities and junior activities for the American Angus Association in St. Joseph, Mo., recently announced.

Mihm is the 18-year-old daughter of John and Robin Mihm. She has shown her Angus cattle at various shows at the local, state and regional levels. She has reigned as the Maryland Angus Queen. She is the membership director for the Maryland Junior Angus Association and has been a member of the National Junior Angus Association since 2002.

The Bronze Award is the first of the three levels of the National Junior Angus Association Recognition Program that began in 1972. Junior Angus breeders must apply for the awards and then meet point requirements in many areas of participation before receiving the honors. Applicants are evaluated in the areas of junior Angus association activities, participation in showmanship and leadership competitions, using performance testing to improve their herd and their progress in producing and merchandising Angus cattle.

Chester County Conducts 4-H Dairy Goat Roundup

HONEY BROOK (Chester Co.) — The Chester County 4-H Dairy Goat Roundup took place at the Romano 4-H Center of Chester County on Rt. 322, Honey Brook. A total of 41 goat projects were exhibited and five 4-H youth participated. This year the show was divided into four breed classes Alpines, Nubians, Toggenburgs, and Recorded Grades.

Dan Torrison of Quakertown did a fine job not only in placing the animals, but also instructing the 4-Hers in how to improve their animals through breeding.

In the Alpine breed, Joe Batchelder of Glen Mills captured both Senior and Grand Champion with his stylish doe, Morningglory, in the 4-5 year age class. Selina Bari of Downingtown received the Reserve Senior and Reserve Grand Champion title in the Alpine breed with Parfait, a doe in the 2-3 year age division. Promise, who showed in the under 4 months of age kid class, was the Junior Champion for Selina, with her 12-24 month old doe, Rowan, being Reserve Jr. Champion.

Veronica Bates of Gradyville received Grand Champion & Sr. Champion of the Nubian breed with her 4-5 year old doe, Snapple. Veronica also won Reserve Grand and Reserve Sr. Champion with Poppy Seed, a doe in the 5 years and over age category; and Jr. Champion with Lora Lee, a kid under 4 months of age. Selina Bari took Reserve Jr. Champion with Diamond, a 4-12 month old kid.

Joe Batchelder headed up the Toggenburg breed when his 4-5 year old doe, April, won both Grand and Senior Champion. Diana Bates of Gradyville received Reserve Grand and Reserve Senior Champion with her doe Brook, who showed in the 1-2 year of age class. Selina Bari was awarded Junior Champion with Sunday, who showed in the under 4 months of age class; and Reserve. Jr. Champion with Dahlia, a kid in the 4-12 age category.

In the Recorded Grades category, Mr. Torrison selected a fine looking 2 to 3 year old doe named Zoe, owned by Jennifer Messner of Glenmoore, for Senior and Grand Champion. Reserve Grand & Reserve Sr. Champion went to Joe Batchelder with his doe, Ricecake, who showed in the same class. The Jr. Champion of the Recorded Grade show was Raisen, a kid who showed in the under 4 months of age group, owned by Selina Bari. Reserve Jr. Champion also went to Selina's goat Carmel, who showed in the 4-12 moths of age group.

The highlight of the Round-Up was when the judge selected Joe Batchelder's outstanding Grand Champion Toggenburg doe, April, for Best In Show honors.

In the Fitting and Showing competition, Veronica Bates was the both the Champion Showman and Champion Fitter for the Senior division, while Joe Batchelder took Reserve honors in both categories. In the Junior competition, Selina Bari received Champion Showman, while Diana Bates was awarded Champion Fitter. In the First Year Division, Jennifer Messner received both Champion Showman and Champion Fitter awards.

Franklin County Fair Holstein Show Names Winners

The Stoner Family of Bell-Stone Farm, Waynesboro, was selected as premier breeder and exhibitor. Andy's Stoner's 4-year-old cow, Bell-Stone Jubal Penny-TW, was best bred and owned of the open and youth shows and reserve grand champion of the youth show.

Berks County Grange A Forerunner At State Convention

ADAMSTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Over 100 awards were presented to contestants representing the Berks County Grange at the 131st Annual Pennsylvania State Grange Session conducted recently at the Inn at Chester Springs, Exton. The Junior Department, representing Berks County Grange members ages 5-14, received the majority of the honors. In some categories, such as Recycled Craft, Art Scenes, Photography — View From my Window, Photography — Wildlife, and Most Creative Field Pumpkin, all awarded places were won by Berks County Junior Grange members. The same can be said for the Subordinate Category where Berks County Granges were awarded all places in the Community Night Program for Granges with more than 151 members.

In addition to the presented awards, the Berks County Junior Grange members were also honored with the opportunity to present the Junior degree. Nearly 20 Berks County Junior Grange members participated in the drill.

Senate Votes To Support COOL

WASHINGTON, D.C. — National Farmers Union President Dave Frederickson said America's farmers, ranchers and consumers won big with the Senate's overwhelming support of mandatory country-of-origin labeling last week.

"The Senate vote sends a strong message to the agriculture appropriations conference committee and to the Agriculture Department to keep COOL and fully implement this beneficial law," Frederickson said.

However, Frederickson said he was disappointed with the vote on Minnesota Sen. Mark Dayton's amendment that would have provided emergency disaster aid for farmers and ranchers facing natural disaster losses during the last three years. Senators rejected the proposal with a 55-to-40 vote.

"Current risk management programs cannot adequately address the economic losses for producers who have been hit with one or multiple years of natural disasters," Frederickson said. "These producers need help now, and Senator Dayton's amendment would have provided this much-needed assistance."

A HEALTHY BARN
Galen Kopp
Extension Agent — Dairy/Livestock
Lebanon County

A "healthy barn" is a barn where cows are calm, clean, dry, comfortable, and breathing quality air. The best way to assess comfort is to compare the scene in your barn to that of cows in a pasture. Do you see 80 to 90 percent of the cows lying down and chewing their cuds?

It's that simple. You want to see the cows either using their stalls or eating — not just standing around not eating, standing partway in a stall, or lying in the alleyways.

To be most productive, cows should lie down 10 to 14 hours a day. Standing for long periods of time leads to sore feed that become susceptible to disease.

Provide non-slip surfaces for confident footing, especially in high traffic areas. Grooving for traction should be patterned to complement the cow's natural way of walking. A well-designed surface provides good footing but is not abrasive. Edges should be smooth.

Routine alley scraping or manure flushing keeps passageways drier, which helps avoid injury and infection.

To avoid injuries, keep cows calm by directing their movements through rounded curves instead of sharp turns. Circular patterns offer alternative routes for getting to and from the feedbunk.

Provide yielding surfaces such as rubber belting around feedbunks to give cows a break from concrete in confinement housing. Or get them out on sod a few hours a day.

An inviting stall must be soft and appealing. What you use for bedding is not as important as the commitment to use enough. Regular scraping and bedding keep stalls clean, dry, and comfortable.

Galen Kopp

Give the cow enough lunging space. The stall should be designed to restrain the cow until she's ready to get up. Then it must allow for her forward and upward momentum to make it easy to rise.

Strive for optimal ventilation. Does the air smell good? The primary cause of respiratory problems in cattle is inadequate ventilation. Disease agents are carried through the air on moisture droplets. Good ventilation reduces moisture content and allows stale, ammonia-laden air, which irritates the lungs, to escape the barn.

Learn to spot foot problems early. The standing 1,400-pound dairy cow puts a load of about 3,150 pounds per square foot on the very thin surface of the hoof. As she walks, the pressure shifts to two feet, increasing to 6,300 pounds per square foot or the equivalent of a loaded forage wagon per wheel. With only a quarter inch of hoof protecting the soft, deeper structures of the foot from the rest of the world, it behooves dairymen to address foot care aggressively. Once the problem gets into those deeper structures, there's not much you can do, and you lose cows.

Pennsylvania Upgraded To Stage IV Pseudorabies Status

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — After working with the swine industry to eradicate pseudorabies in the Commonwealth after the discovery of the disease in several swine operations in a seven-county area last year, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture is pleased to announce that the state has been upgraded to Stage IV pseudorabies status.

Also known as Aujeszkys Disease, pseudorabies ("false rabies") is a viral disease of swine that causes weakness or death of young pigs. While swine are most susceptible to this disease, cattle, sheep, goats, dogs, cats, and wildlife are also vulnerable. These animals may develop lethal neurologic problems if exposed to pseudorabies. Humans cannot contract the disease.

States achieve Stage V status when they have been at Stage IV for at least one year with no new outbreaks. Stage IV is considered a surveillance stage where there are no known positive swine, and routine surveillance at slaughter plants is occurring. Last year, Adams, Berks, Franklin, Fulton, Lancaster, Lebanon, and York were lowered to Stage III status, a mandatory herd cleanup stage where positive herds are depopulated. Since that time, the Pennsylvania swine industry has participated in additional testing requirements prior to the movement and sale of certain categories of swine.

"The swine industry and the Department are working hard to eliminate pseudorabies in Pennsylvania once again," said Agriculture Secretary Dennis C Wolff. "After intensive surveillance, including testing of more than 46,000 swine from over 400 different farms, Pennsylvania has been upgraded to Stage IV status statewide. If Pennsylvania keeps the current rate of progress, we expect that the Commonwealth will qualify once again for Stage V status in April of 2004. At that time, Pennsylvania would officially be designated as a pseudorabies-free state once again."

Wolff added that until Pennsylvania reaches Stage V status, current pseudorabies testing requirements must continue in order to exhibit swine at Pennsylvania fairs and shows.

AJCA Offers Jersey Youth Experience Award

REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio — The American Jersey Cattle Association (AJCA) is accepting applications for the 2004 Fred Stout Experience Award. Persons who have significant experience in breeding, managing, and showing registered Jersey cattle, and intend to make a career in managing and/or marketing Jersey genetics are encouarged to apply.

The Stout Experience Award was created by friends of Fred J. Stout Jr., Mt. Carmel, Ill., a lifelong Jersey breeder who died in May 2000. Stout believed that the best learning experiences happen in the everyday world.

The award provides partial support for an internship proposed by the applicant of at least two months. Preference will be given to proposals that involve on-farm practical management of registered Jerseys or working with Jersey Marketing Service in a cattle marketing experience, such as the annual All-American Jersey Sale.

Applicants must be high school graduates. To apply, submit a one-page resume summarizing work experience, skills, and qualifications with a cover letter. The cover letter should specify the applicant's personal and career goals, including plans for achieving them. It should also explain how the Fred Stout Experience would benefit the applicant in achieving these goals. The letter must specify the length of internship, type of experience, and the expected date of completion.

Two letters of support must be requested by applicants. One recommendation letter must be from a breeder of registered Jerseys (excluding family members). The second recommendation should be written by a teacher, mentor, or previous employer. These letters must be sent directly by their authors to the AJCA office.

Applications and letters of support must be postmarked no later than Feb. 1, 2004, and addressed to the Fred. Stout Experience, American Jersey Cattle Association, 6486 E. Main Street, Reynoldsburg, OH 43068-2362. Materials submitted by fax and/or email will not be accepted.

Finding Fuel For Firewood

It may be too late to cut wood for the fireplace this year, but it's just the right time to prepare for next winter. "You always want to split and then dry your wood a full year," said Mike Powell, senior research technologist for Penn State's School of Forest Resources. So before the leaves fall, woodland owners are walking through their woods and selecting those trees that will become next year's firewood.

A good firewood tree is not necessarily the straightest and tallest tree in the forest. Powell suggests choosing trees with crooked stems, ruptured bark, or broken crowns. The healthiest trees should be left behind to increase the future value of the woodlot. "Especially if you want to manage for timber, you don't want to cut straight trees," he said. Powell also suggests avoiding trees that are difficult to split by hand, like black gum and elm. Nevertheless, leaving too many of the same species may lead to competition with more desirable trees, said Jim Finley, professor of forest resources at Penn State.

Which species make the best firewood "depends on preference," Powell said. All hardwoods, or deciduous trees, have some value as firewood. "Yellow poplar, willow, and cottonwood generate the least amount of heat and won't last as long as an oak would. Lower-quality oaks like scarlet and pin make good firewood trees." Locust burns longest and generates the most heat because its wood is the densest per unit volume.

According to Finley, many people choose to cut dead trees for firewood because they believe that the wood is dry, but this is a fallacy. Finley explained how dead trees benefit the forest, "They slowly return nutrients to the soil, serve as seedbeds for some plants, and provide habitat for important insects, amphibians, and other animals. You want to retain both standing and fallen dead trees — the bigger the better."

Felling trees is dangerous. Finley cautions against felling trees with vines in the stem or crown, which may present a safety hazard. And if a log is covered in vines, homeowners beware; this may be poison ivy. Landowners who lack experience with a chainsaw should hire a professional to cut their trees, said Powell. "There are a lot of things that can happen if you don't have the proper training and the proper equipment. People think that because they can buy a chainsaw that they know how to use it."

Northern Piedmont Area Field Crop Conference Set In Virginia

WARRENTON, Va. — Farmers, crop advisors and others interested in corn, soybean, and small grains production are invited to attend the 1st Annual Northern Piedmont Area Field Crop Conference Wednesday, Dec. 17, at the Fauquier County Fairgrounds in Warrenton, Va.

The registration table and exhibits will be open at 8 a.m., with the program running from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. An industry-sponsored lunch will be served. This educational conference has been planned and is being conducted by the Virginia Cooperative Extension Offices in the Northern Piedmont region of Virginia.

The conference includes a diverse selection of subjects relevant to the field crop producer. Topics to be discussed include: managing soil quality and soil compaction, research updates in soybeans & corn silage, field crop weed control, price outlook in corn, soybeans & small grains, crop insurance, soil fertility management.

Conference speakers are from Virginia Tech, Penn State University, and private agri-business.

This conference will provide recertification credits for Virginia private pesticide licenses in category 90, for Virginia commercial pesticide licenses in categories 1a, 10 and 60.

Continuing education credits for Certified Crop Advisors will also be available. An industry trade show featuring regional agri-businesses, government agencies and farm equipment displays will be ongoing throughout the conference.

This field day is being offered free to all with an interest in field crop production. However, to help ensure adequate meal and handout arrangements, pre-registration is requested.

Pre-register by contacting the Fauquier County Extension Office at (540) 341-7950, extension 10, or e-mail FauquierAgExtension@vt.edu by Friday, Dec. 12.

NFU Will Continue To Fight For COOL

WASHINGTON, D.C. — National Farmers Union blames meatpackers, large food processors, and the Bush administration for the recent actions by the majority leaders of the appropriations conference committee to delay the mandatory country-of-origin labeling (COOL) law for two years.

"This two-year delay is undoubtedly a tactic to make this widely popular law more vulnerable to repeal after the presidential elections," said NFU President Dave Frederickson. "It is a travesty that U.S. consumers' interests are losing out to pressure from the retailers, packers and processors, who all have aggressively fought this law since its inception."

The delay will effectively kill COOL for meats, fruits and vegetables. Wild fish would be the only food item exempt from the delay, which should prove beneficial for salmon fishermen in Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Ted Stevens' state of Alaska.

"There is definitely something fishy about this process," Frederickson said. "When this law has been addressed in the light of day it has had broad bipartisan support ... The Senate recently revoiced its strong bipartisan support for COOL with 58 votes and now a deal has been struck behind closed doors by the majority leadership of the committees with no recourse for individual members of Congress except for an up-or-down vote on the omnibus spending measure. What is wrong with this picture?"

"Consumers, farmers and ranchers will not stand for this kind of behind-the-scenes fleecing," Frederickson said. "To put this beneficial law on a shelf to wait for another subversive attack is unacceptable. We will not give up on this important legislation, which is an educational tool for consumers and a marketing tool for U.S. farmers and ranchers."

FSA County Committee Election Day

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Ballots were recently mailed to eligible voters in Local Administrative Area 2 and must be returned or postmarked by Dec. 1.

"It is crucial that every eligible agricultural producer take part in this election because county committees are a direct link between the farm community and the U.S. Department of Agriculture," said Kathy Heil, Lancaster County Executive Director.

FSA county committees make decisions on: commodity price support loans and payments; establishment of allotments, yields, and marketing quotas; farmer loans; and conservation programs; incentive, indemnity, and disaster payments for some commodities; and other farm disaster assistance. If you did not receive a ballot and feel you are eligible to vote, contact the Farm Servie Agency at (717) 397-6235.

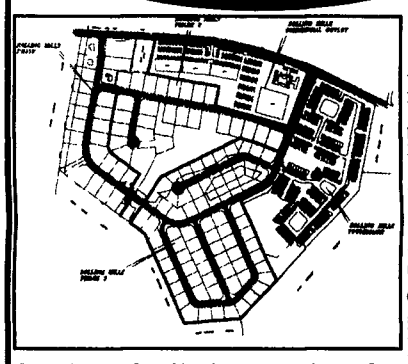
REAL ESTATE AUCTION
FRI., DEC. 12th, 2003
@ 10:00 AM
BUILDER * DEVELOPER * INVESTOR * DREAM AUCTION



PROPERTY LOCATION: 1 1/2 miles West of Greencastle, PA on Rt. 16 on the left. Look for auction signs. Auction to be held at Matthew S. Hurley Auction Co. Legacy Center 2800 Buchanan Trail East, Greencastle, PA.
DIRECTIONS: From I-81 exit 5 (Greencastle old exit 3) go east 3 miles on Rt. 16, auction on right. Approx. 5 miles W of Waynesboro on left. (10 min. N of Hagerstown, MD).

Matthew S. Hurley Auction Co. Inc. and Higgenbotham Auctioneers International, are pleased to offer at public auction approx. 75 +/- acres of prime residential & commercial land located 1 1/2 miles west of Greencastle, Pennsylvania with over 1,800 feet of frontage on PA Route 16. This property is serviced by Antrim Township Municipal Sewer.

The property is ideally located in Antrim Township, the fastest growing Township in Franklin Co., and is easily accessible from Interstates 81 and 70, making it an easy commute to Washington D.C. and Baltimore, MD.

The property has been appropriately named "Rolling Hills" after the beautiful countryside that surrounds it. Phase I, which consisted of 24 lots, has already been completed, leaving approx. 75 +/- acres with limitless potential. The remaining lands will be offered as tracts, combinations of tracts, and as a whole.

TRACT I (PHASE 5)

Tract I (Phase 5) consists of approx. 10 acres of prime community-commercial zoned land that would be ideal for shopping centers or other businesses with approx. 1,300 feet of road frontage on Route 16, and is ideally located between Mercersburg, PA and Greencastle, PA.

TRACT II (PHASE 2)

Tract II (Phase 2) consists of 26 building lots with approx. 12.75 +/- acres and has been submitted to and reviewed by Antrim Township. Approval is subject to payment of recreational fees and bonding.

TRACT III (PHASES 3 & 4)

Tract III (Phases 3 & 4) consists of the remaining 52.5 +/- acres and approx. 550 feet of road frontage on Rt. 16, which has endless potential. Possibilities include single family homes, town houses, apartments, a retirement community, and much, much, more. The property has two new wells that offer the possibility for an onsite water company. The wells have a combined production of over 110 gpm. Preliminary engineering has been completed for this phase and includes single family lots, townhouses and apartments.

TERMS: If property sells in separate tracts, a non-refundable deposit shall be made in the form of cash, or certified funds in the amount of $50,000 per tract. If property sells as a whole, a deposit of $100,000 will be required. Deposit shall be increased to 10% within 10 days of the auction. Settlement in 60 days or less. 10% Buyer's Premium. This is a reserve auction with immediate owner confirmation.

DISCLAIMER: If property sells in tracts. The sale shall be contingent upon final subdivision approval by the Antrim Township Board of Supervisors. The purchaser of Tract II shall be responsible for paying the sewer, recreational fees, road bonding, and any fees necessary for Township approval of said subdivision and settlement shall take place within 10 days of final approval by the Township. If Tracts I & III are purchased by separate purchasers, this sale is contingent upon Seller obtaining full and final subdivision approval of Tract I as a singular tract, salable separate from Tract III.

PROPERTY INSPECTION: Representatives will be onsite Saturday, Nov. 29, from 2-4 pm and Saturday, Dec. 6th, from 2-4 pm. Or info may be obtained by calling (866) 424-3337 or visiting www.hurleyauctions.com.

ABA Ag Committee Vice Chairman Presides Over Conference

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Mike Firestine, vice chairman of the American Bankers Association (ABA) Agriculture Committee, was the presiding officer over the second day (Nov. 11) of ABA's 51st Annual National Ag Conference in San Antonio.

"The conference was developed to educate and motivate agricultural bankers about the challenges and opportunities surrounding the future of agricultural banking," Firestine said. "As the economy tightens, it will take increased dedication, determination and leadership to navigate those challenges."

Firestine introduced speakers before more than 500 agricultural banking professionals from 31 states and Canada. He also marked a moment of silence to remember the nation's veterans as well as remember those who are serving in Iraq.

Speakers include ABA Chairman C. Ken Fergeson; agricultural economist David M. Kohl; as well as president and CEO of the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, Robert D. McTeer Jr. These and more than 50 other speakers addressed issues such as: the future of the rural community bank franchise, what happens if mad cow disease is found in the United States, monetary policies and the economic outlook for 2004, agricultural credit management, emerging farm technology, and tourism as part of rural America's future.

A highlight of the conference was Firestine's announcement of the seventh annual Bruning Award, which recognizes the lifetime achievement of bankers who have dedicated their careers to providing credit and other financial services to rural Americans. This year's award went to B.A. Donelson, chairman, First State Bank in Stratford, Texas. Donelson has been farming and ranching for 45 years and began work in the banking industry in 1967.

Grumbine Appointed Chair Of Ag Committee

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Ken Knowles, CFE from Alberta, Canada and chair-elect of the International Association of Fairs and Expositions (IAFE), has asked Dennis L. Grumbine CFE to serve as committee chair for the 2004 Agriculture Committee.

IAFE has a worldwide membership of more than 3,200 fairs and expositions. Since most of the member events are deeply involved is agriculture, this committee is very important to the association and serves as a vehicle to advance and promote agriculture with the fair and expo industry.

Dennis Grumbine, vice chairman, will assume the chairman position during the annual IAFE Convention in Las Vegas, Nev. Dec. 3. As chairman of the Agriculture Committee, Grumbine will oversee a committee of more than 30 representatives from not only North America but several foreign countries. The incoming vice chairperson is Lisa Hinton from the Florida State Fair and the immediate past chairman is Mike Bradley from the California State Fair.

Grumbine said he is honored and excited to have been appointed chairman of this prestigious committee.

"I have been involved in the livestock and fair industry for my entire life and look forward to exploring the opportunities that exist to promote agriculture and ag awareness to the globe," he said, "and to pursue ideas that will involve more youth, adults, and the consumer in the importance of our industry to our everyday lives."

Mid-Atlantic Breeders Sale Dec. 10-12

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A new horse auction is being planned to take place Dec. 10-12, the Mid-Atlantic Breeders Sale, here at the Pennsylvania Farm Show Complex.

The new event will represent the American Morgan and American Saddlebred breeds, also including some Hackney Horse and Pony consignments.

The planners of the event have reached the conclusion that based on the large numbers of horses in the region and the interest of new breeders, there is a need for this type of sale.

All consignments will be required to be included in the sale catalog and all horses sold will be required to be registered with their respective breed registries. Consignors are encouraged to provide the best possible care and management to the animals consigned to this auction.

There will be a broad spectrum of breeding stallions and broodmares, show horses, pleasure horses, and sport horses.

Included will be a breeding stallion presentation in which services to the stallions will be sold with the proceeds donated to a needy cause. There will be sale horse presentations of the various breeds the evening before they are sold. There will be a tack sale, and there will be vendors.

For more information, call Dale Stoltzfus at (717) 940-4412.

PASS To Survey Cattle Farmers

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — How have the current prices for cattle and milk affected the state's inventory? The Pennsylvania Agriculture Statistics Service (PASS) will be surveying approximately 1,600 cattle farmers for its largest cattle survey of the year starting Dec. 30 and ending on Jan. 12, 2004.

This survey will give the most accurate picture of the cattle situation for the entire year. Estimates made will include the total number of cattle and calves as of Jan. 1, 2004, as well as the total heifers, steers, milk cows, and beef cows.

Pennsylvania farmers had 1,630,000 cattle and calves on hand on Jan. 1, down 10,000 head from the Jan. 1 2002 level, according to PASS.

During 2002, 28,000 Pennsylvania operations had cattle and calves, unchanged from the previous year. There were 9,900 farms that had milk cows, 400 less than 2001. There were 11,200 farms with beef cows, 100 more than 2001.

Results from 2004 January Cattle Survey will be made available on Jan. 30, 2004.

Sparkling Holiday Ideas To Duplicate With Ease

Mickey Nagle uses gold spray paint to transform an orange Cinderella pumpkin into a glitzy container. He filled it with golden rod, Gerba daisies, freesia, orchid stems, bittersweet, foliage, and purple roses. Drape raffia over the edge of the pumpkin opening.

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Entertaining guests during the holidays too often results in harried hostesses rushing to complete last-minute decorating, cooking, and shopping.

Creative and easy-to-duplicate ideas are desired by most imaginative hostesses who want to avoid last minute frenzy.

A plethora of festive ideas for home decor and holiday-inspired dishes that put a delicious twist on traditional favorites were presented during annual holiday workshops offered by Penn State Cooperative Extensions in Berks and Lebanon counties. The ideas on this page and on B12 are from those workshops. Look for more kitchen gift ideas and holiday cooking and baking recipes in upcoming issues of Lancaster Farming.

Sylvia Updegrove, right, presents ideas for using vintage household items for gift giving.

Holiday Glitz American Style

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Mickey Nagle makes a living arranging flowers for sale in his shop, Majestic Florals, Reading.

His designs are usual and never symmetrical.

"When I see door wreaths with every item spaced evenly around it, I want to pluck some of the items off it and make is asymmetrical," Nagle said of his animosity for predictable designs.

Recently Nagle demonstrated his eye-appealing designs by showing the difference between arranging items evenly spaced and those with a more free-flowing appearance.

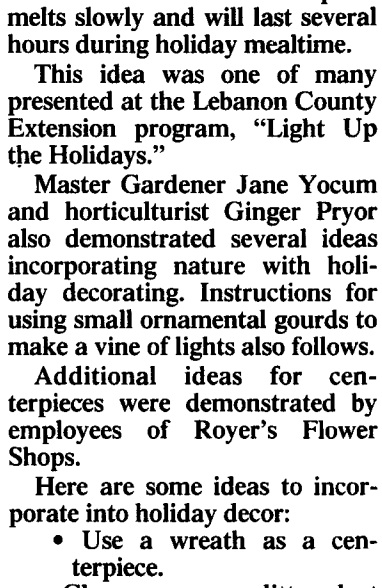
Nagle has no hard and fast rules. He haphazardly inserts flowers at different levels for impact.

"Whatever looks right to you will probably work," he said.

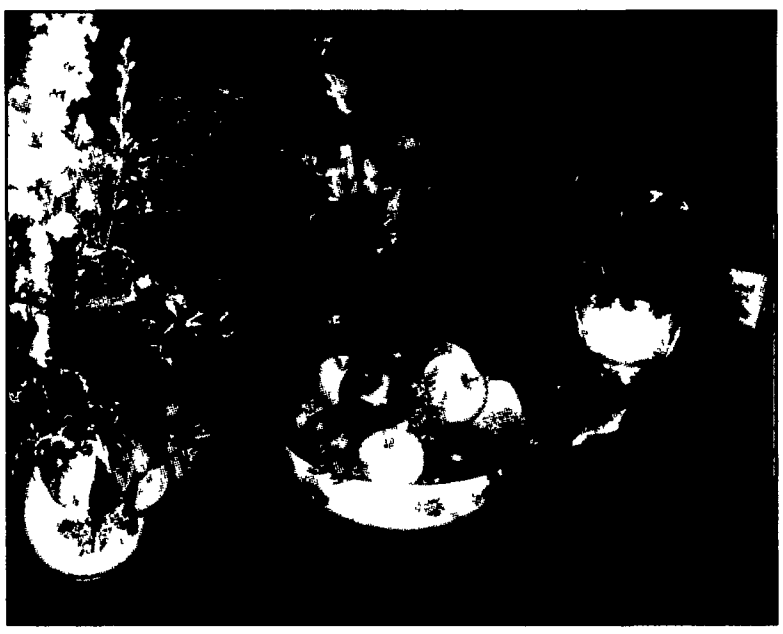
Fortunately, too, for the 600 people gathered at the Berks County holiday program, Nagle shared some of his design secrets.

Here are some ideas you may want to incorporate in your holiday arrangement. Of course, if you don't want to tackle the project, Nagle will be happy to sell it premade from his flower shop.

- Insert wild grasses, fallen twigs, and looped beads to combine different textures and unusual interest among flowers.
- Look for unusual floral containers. He cut out a Cinderella pumpkin, spray-painted it gold, and inserted a glass vase inside to hold fresh flowers and foliages in place.
- Cut foliage and flower stems at an angle.
- Wire or hot glue pine cones in clusters to insert in floral arrangements.
- Use a variety of greens for interest.
- Tie Christmas bulbs to greenery in arrangements.
- Spray paint branches white or gold or glitter and insert to add interest among the greenery.
- Use a variety of unusual flowers not necessarily thought of as Christmas flowers. He likes to use white snapdragons, white lilies, Asiatic lilies, orchids, tulips, and in unusual colors such as purple or jewel tones.
- Add floral sprays to old toys and use for indoor or outdoor decor. Sleds, tricycles, and metal riding toys are some items that display well.



Duplicate this wreath made by Mickey Nagle during a Berks County Extension program on holiday glitz American style.



Use green or red apples and pears to make a quick and easy centerpiece. Start with an attractive container. Fill with apples, pine cones, or pears. Accent with holiday greens such as pine, holly, juniper, boxwood, incense cedar, or Douglas fir. If desired, add a small strand of lights for special effects. A tree-shape centerpiece can be made by trimming floral foam into a tree shape. Attach heavy wooden pick to fruit. Insert fruit picks and greenery to cover foam. Finish top of tree with a bow and streams, or flowing greens.

Use Vintage Household Items To Package Gifts

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Vintage household items make the perfect package for gifts from the kitchen said Sylvia Updegrove, home economist.

Updegrove demonstrated many ideas for incorporating vintage pieces such as canning jars, old tins, potato mashers, sieves, and other kitchenware into gift giving during the holiday program, offered by Berks County Extension recently.

Here are some of her ideas:

- Fill a muffin tin with jars of homemade jellies and preserves. If you don't make your own preserves, you can buy them at bazaars and at holiday fund-raising events.
- Fill glass jars with peppermint candy.
- Fill an old baking tin with fresh or artificial greens.
- Line an old tin with a homespun napkin. Insert gift such as jar of preserves and pull together ends of napkin and tie shut. Insert a spray of greenery in tie.
- Tuck a tea towel into an old flour sifter, and fill with cookies. Tie tea towel ends with fabric or ribbon. Tuck in a few greens for bow.
- Place a doily on a sieve. Fill with homemade cookies. Tuck greenery and a little homemade angel in the sieve's handle.
- Fill an aluminum grater with a bag of cookies. Regular food baggies are cloudy — use clear bags found in craft supply stores.
- Tie a bag of cookies to a potato masher. Decorate with greenery and rustic birdhouse.
- Line old tins with doilies. Fill with coffee items such as flavored coffees and cookies.
- Fill wooden cheese box with dip mixes, cheese ball, and gourmet crackers.
- Fill milk pail with candy-shaped cows.
- Use individual Jell-O molds for party favors. Insert a candle and candy cane.
- Fill a teacup and saucer with tea bags and tea-related items. Gather cellophane around teacup and saucer and attach a wire ribbon.
- A fruit basket doesn't need to use a basket as a container. Use old canisters, pans, or a hammered aluminum bowl as containers instead of baskets.
- Use canning jars to layer ingredients to make soups, cookies, or cake. Use a natural-colored coffee filter and secure with rubber band. Tie a jute bow around the jar lid to hide the rubber band.
- Place a gift certificate into a canning jar or other container.

Light Up The Holidays

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Looking for a stunning table centerpiece for your holiday dinner?

Try making a fire and ice lantern. The frozen centerpiece melts slowly and will last several hours during holiday mealtime.

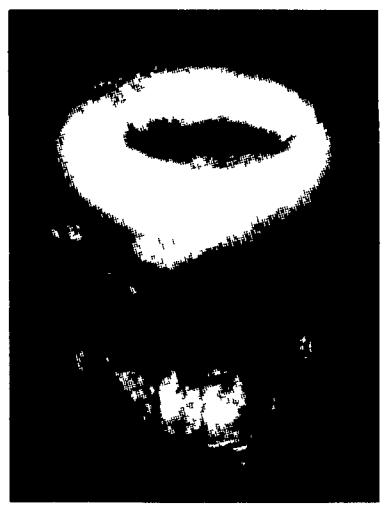
This idea was one of many presented at the Lebanon County Extension program, "Light Up the Holidays."

Master Gardener Jane Yocum and horticulturist Ginger Pryor also demonstrated several ideas incorporating nature with holiday decorating. Instructions for using small ornamental gourds to make a vine of lights also follows.

Additional ideas for centerpieces were demonstrated by employees of Royer's Flower Shops.

Here are some ideas to incorporate into holiday decor:

- Use a wreath as a centerpiece.
- Clear spray or glitter dust gives a sheen and preserves greenery and pine cones.
- Place fresh cranberries in water in a clear bowl. Insert fresh flower in center if desired. Set bowl in center of table top wreath.
- Soak boxwood and greenery in warm water 15-20 minutes before arranging to help them last longer.
- Do not put live wreath between a storm door and exterior door. The glass magnifies the sun and dries out the wreath. Either remove the window from the storm door for the winter or stick to silk wreaths.
- Garland can be cut and hung oblong or placed on mantels and table tops. Attach other greenery, berries, bulbs, and decorations to the garland.
- Spray twigs gold, silver, white, or with glitter. Insert in arrangements.
- For miniature arrangements at place settings, cut opening in apple. Insert boxwood, flowers, or a name card.



This easy to make fire and ice lantern makes an attractive table centerpiece, but make sure to set a shallow container beneath it to collect the melting ice.

(and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

Forget the turkey leftovers.

Forget the shopping frenzy of the weekend.

Forget the limbs tossed down, the leaves still whipping around and those lingering outside chores complicated by Mother Nature's erratic mood swings and frequent moisture outburst tamtrums.

Forget all the usual, mundane things of daily life as the Keystone State shuts down for that greatest hunter's holiday that dwarfs all others. Even if you aren't an active participant, you could hardly miss the blitz of advertising for gear or the extended holiday observed by umpteen schools across the commonwealth.

Oh deer!

The annual white-tail economic revival of remote areas is already underway, as legions of license-bearing hunters head for the hinterlands. While mass marketers eagerly awaited "black" Friday for its traditional buying boost with cash and credit card swiping, many small mountain-region communities of our state get their year-end economic boost courtesy of buck season.

Legions of trophy tales — of those gotten and those that got away — will arise from the deep, dark depths of the forests. The accounts will resound, hashed and rehashed through multiple tellings, from walls of tiny, rough-built cabins to those of fancy lodges.

By week's end, the empty-handed may be wishing they had done their stalking someplace else. At least in the mountainous area with which we are most familiar, the deer "take" has steadily declined in recent years. Meanwhile, back down the valley a piece, on a large piece of ground held by a sprawling state institution, banned to hunting and bordered by homes, the deer herd grazes like a bunch of cows.

Deer did not come to their abundant population numbers by being deaf, dumb, and blind. Like bear, foxes, coyotes, and other of the larger state predator species, they know a good thing when they find it.

And, a good thing for a deer is a lush stand of some farmer's alfalfa. Why nibble forest browse when you could be munching sweet, tasty forage? Which is why, increasingly, the "big bucks" may likely be those that hang out in less-stalked place. Like a patch of scrub growth along an interstate, behind an edge-of-town shopping mall, or a small backyard orchard bordering a housing development.

While we love to watch the few that hang out in our neighborhood, we sympathize with acquaintances who lament herds of 50 whitetails nibbling their way through prime hayfields, night after night. Many of them are happy to share access to that abundance to hunters who display common sense, courtesy, and respect of property.

Let's repeat that, hunters: common sense, courtesy, and respect of property are critical. And, we have several hunters who are year-round regulars here, almost like part of the family. But ...

During goose hunting season, we allowed a few new individuals to hunt a huge invasion of geese that descended into our rye and oats fall pasture seeding. Because of cows, machinery and beloved grandchildren roaming the place, we set strict boundaries about where anyone can be with a gun.

So when I spied a camo-dressed young man strolling, gun in hand, right behind the lawn fence early one evening, with the grandchildren romping around the yard, I became "unglued." And downright unfriendly.

One night later I totally "freaked out" when what sounded like a series of shots erupted right outside the house. Panic stricken, I went flying out in search of the intruder, to find grandson Caleb stomping on a piece of that puffy-plastic packaging material that was popping with loud cracks.

Some of the best hunting trophies — and the best stories — come from the least likely places.

Like that of a neighbor, currently carrying around a stranger-than-fiction deer antler trophy. A buck crashed into his SUV and died beneath the vehicle. Once back on the road, a bumping sound from beneath sent our friend back to the side of the road to check the ominous sound.

Stuck in one of his tires was a four-inch antler spike, which had apparently impaled the tread on impact. In a stroke of good fortune, the antler point remained embedded in the tire until he reached a repair center.

Beat that story, all you hunters headed for the hills.

And don't foret your spare tire.

Strickler Receives Prestigious Award

On Nov. 11, the PA Extension Association of Family and Consumer Science (PEAFCS), a professional association of Penn State Cooperative Extension educators, selected, Jorja Barton, director of agency relations for the Central Pennsylvania Food Bank, as the honorary award winner given to individuals who give exemplarily support to Penn State Cooperative Extension family living programming in a county or region. Jorja resides with her husband, Roger in Hummelstown and is an active member in several community organizations. Her role at the Central Pennsylvania Food Bank (CPFB) has enabled her to work closely with Penn State Cooperative Extension in the Capital Region in developing and initiating new programs to feed the hungry, to work collaboratively to engage others in reducing and eliminating hunger, and promote healthy eating choices through educational programming for adults and youth.

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Fay B. Strickler, Berks County family and consumer sciences educator for Penn State Cooperative Extension, was recently recognized as the recipient of the Distinguished Service Award by Alpha Omicron Chapter of Epsilon Sigma Phi (ESP), the national organization for extension professionals.

Strickler, a 30 year veteran of cooperative extension, was recognized for her programming in diet, nutrition and health, and food safety education. Specific examples of successful accomplishments for programming in food safety certification for individuals who work in the food service industry, nutrition education programs for the public, leadership education and outreach to diverse audiences were cited during the presentation of the award.

Strickler was also recognized for excellence in programming through cooperation and collaboration with a variety of local and state organizations and agencies. In addition to developing and presenting educational programs, Stickler makes extensive use of media to distribute foods and nutrition information to the public.

Fay B. Strickler, who writes the Consuming Thoughts newspaper column, is a recipient of a national consumer science educator's Distinguished Service Award.

She writes a regular column for Lancaster Farming "Consuming Thoughts" and is often featured in articles in The Reading Eagle/Times; and appears on Berks Community Television and on local Berks County talk radio on a regular basis.

Throughout her career, Strickler has been involved in the National Association of Extension Family and Consumer Sciences (NAEFCS) and Epsilon Sigma Phi (ESP) and the state affiliates of the two organizations. She has served in key leadership positions at national and state levels for both of these professional associations. Elected as second vice president for professional development in 1997, she provided leadership for all educational sessions held in conjunction with two national annual meetings of NEAFCS. In 1999 she was elected to the leadership board of ESP, ultimately serving as national president of the fraternity in 2001-2002. In May 2003, Strickler had the distinction of being selected as one of five field-based educators to serve on the extension committee on organization and policy national leadership advisory council.

The Distinguished Service Award, the highest, most prestigious award given by Epsilon Sigma Phi was presented to Strickler in recognition of excellence in cooperative extension programming and for outstanding service and contribution to the profession.

Cook's Tips

PUMPKIN DESSERTS

- Pumpkin is a good source of betacarotene, a nutrient that may help reduce the risk of developing certain types of cancer, and offers possible protection against heart disease.
- TOPPINGS: Use nonfat ice cream, or frozen yogurt and fat-free whipped topping for a lighter version.

The best way to soften ice cream is to let it sit out at room temperature for about 15 minutes or in the refrigerator for 30 minutes. Note that low-fat ice creams and frozen yogurts melt faster than full-fat varieties. Avoid repeatedly softening and refreezing ice cream as it gets icy.

- If you don't have pumpkin pie spice, for each teaspoon of pumpkin pie space, you can substitute a combination of:

1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
1/8 teaspoon ground nutmeg
1/8 teaspoon ground cloves

The 3-foot-by-4-foot New England map shows 36,000 miles of streams plus lakes
The 2 1/2-foot-by-3-foot New Jersey map shows 8,300 miles of streams plus lakes

The STREAM MAP OF PENNSYLVANIA was completed in 1965 after a thirty-year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor.

The map is known as the LOST STREAM MAP to some anglers.

Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible. a map that shows every stream and lake He painstakingly plotted by hand the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3 by 5 foot map

The map sold extremely well--until it was lost several years later Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to a landfill

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized fisherman's possession. Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key

Experts told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue.

Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true Computers made it possible to reprint the map Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day."

Professor Higbee's maps are the first and only highly detailed maps of their kind.

Professor Higbee's

RAVE REVIEWS

'It is amazingly detailed and names some creeks in the Mohawk Valley that can't even be found on topographic maps "
—John Pitarres, OBSERVER-DISPATCH, Utica

"If you're looking for the most definitive maps ever created depicting every single creek, river, stream, pond and lake then 'Professor Higbee's Stream Maps' are without question the finest "
—Howard Brant, THE NEWARK STAR-LEDGER

"It is in showing where to find out-of-the-way trout streams that makes the map such a treasure to the fisherman."
—Joe Gordon, TRIBUNE-DEMOCRAT, Johnstown

Link Between Diet And Chronic Disease

Why does increasing nutrition education in the schools, the variety and overall consumption of fruits, vegetables, and dairy foods, and amount of student physical activity so strongly impact good health? Why are we concerned with these objectives?

The research is convincing that by meeting these goals we will be decreasing the risk of the major chronic diseases affecting Americans now and for our youth in the future: coronary heart disease, cancer, Type 2 diabetes, high blood pressure, and obesity.

The following is a summary of some current scientific research linking a poor diet and chronic disease:

Did You Know?

- Only an average of 33-36 percent of children in the U.S. consume the recommended minimum number of servings (5) of fruits and vegetables, and dairy (3) based on USDA's Food Guide Pyramid.
- Nationally the percentage of overweight children aged 6-18 has tripled in the last 30 years, doubled in the last 20 years, and is now at 15 percent.
- Nearly one-third of all children aged 5-10 have one cardiac risk factor: elevated blood cholesterol, high LDL, high triglycerides (artery clogging fats in the blood), elevated insulin levels. 61 percent of overweight children have one cardiac risk factor, 27 percent have two risk factors.
- Eating a wide variety of fruits and vegetables is associated with lower body weight. They provide fiber and a feeling of fullness.
- Fruits and vegetables contain natural plant chemicals; many protect our body's cells from cancer and heart disease. Try adding new kinds and colorful varieties for taste and their protective qualities to your meals and snacks.
- Dairy foods contain calcium and Vitamin D, essential for children to eat now while they are growing and to protect against the bone-thinning disease osteoporosis later in life. Adequate dietary calcium may also protect against colon cancer.
- The rate of Type 2 diabetes in Pennsylvania is exploding—the major causes are overweight and physical inactivity.
- Penn State University research shows children need to be exposed to new foods, especially vegetables, 10-12 or more times before they will accept them, and to decrease pickiness as well.

How can schools and parents help?

- Many Penn State Extension Family Living Educators are working with the Pennsylvania Department of Health, Pennsylvania Advocates of Nutrition and Physical Activity, schools and community partners to improve school-aged child health. Family Living Educators offer a variety of health-promoting programs in all counties. Contact your local educators for more information in your area.

Together we can improve the health of families and youth in Pennsylvania.

Secrets For Serving Lamb

DENVER, Colo. — While home cooks principally serve lamb for springtime feasts or a special holiday occasion, succulent lamb entrees are featured on restaurant menus year-round. In fact, lamb's popularity in restaurants has increased by 50-percent in recent years.

So do professional chefs possess special secrets about lamb? Acclaimed chefs including Jim Botsacos of Molyvos Restaurant in New York City, Pano Karatassos of Kyma Restaurant in Atlanta, Melissa Perello of Charles Nob Hill Restaurant in San Francisco, and Brooke Vosika of the Four Seasons Hotel in New York, are prime "lambassadors" who all generously reveal their lamb lore.

One secret that's necessary to share, it seems, is that all cuts of lamb are freshly available and affordable beyond spring, throughout every season. In the United States alone, there are more than 75,000 lamb producers yielding high quality, fresh domestic products every day.

Another secret is that lamb is easy to prepare, and in many popular "all American" and ethnic styles. "American lamb, in particular, is sweet, tender and mildly flavored, so it soaks up an array of marinades and seasonings," said Chef Botsacos. "Lamb has a great affinity with many seasonal herbs and spices, which is one reason it's a highly revered meat in the Caribbean, Europe and along the Mediterranean shores."

The mild flavor profile of American lamb can come as a pleasant surprise to some home cooks who may generalize all lamb products as having a strong, even gamy, taste. This is a misperception when it comes to domestically raised lamb, which is freshly available and primarily grain fed to produce its clean milk flavor and high meat-to-bone ratio.

"American lamb's distinctive taste holds up perfectly with numerous cooking methods," said Chef Perello. She adds that various lamb cuts are ideal for grilling, broiling, roasting, braising, stewing, sauteing, and stir-frying.

Many leading specialty food retailers are featuring a larger array of lamb cuts in the meat case year-round due to the latest culinary trends. "Our customers are seeking alternatives to mainstream beef, pork, and chicken because of the strong shift in both creative and ethnic cooking styles seen in restaurants," said Edward Penfold, a butcher at the popular Fox and Obel gourmet marketplace in Chicago. "Another trend lamb supports is the focus on protein diets, as customers want to savor flavorful protein options."

Four Seasons' Chef Vosika, whose American lamb entrees change with the leaves, believes in the idea of "Sunday Lamb" to be regularly enjoyed by couples. On lazy Sundays, couples can savor the aromas of slow cooked lamb.

Chef Karatassos believes that while lamb is certainly an impressive dish to mark a special occasion, it can easily be prepared anytime at home. "Ground lamb is an appetizing way to extend lamb's holiday welcome in the American kitchen and backyard grills. It could be used for savory appetizer meatballs, or for seasonally spiced lamb burgers — the ultimate gourmet burger."

American lamb is the leanest, meatiest lamb in the world, thanks to sophisticated breeding and nutrition programs. Unlike most red meats, lamb does not have a "marbling" of saturated fat throughout its cuts. This makes for one of the leanest red meats one can eat. With most of the fat limited to the outside edges, it's easily trimmed. A recent study shows that only about 36-percent of the fat in lamb is saturated. The rest is mono or polyunsaturated, the "good" fat in one's diet.

Lamb is also relatively low in calories, as some cuts of a cooked, lean, three-ounce serving constitutes less than 200 calories. Its protein is nutritionally complete, providing all eight amino acids in the proper ratio and it is high in B vitamins, niacin, zinc, and iron. All nutrition facts reference the U.S. Department of Agriculture's National Nutrient Database for Standard Reference, Release 16 (July 2003).

A variety of American lamb cuts are comparable in price to other finer beef and pork cuts, according to Penfold. Shoulder cuts are among the most flavorful, and always a good value regardless of the time of year.

If a particular cut is not in the meat case, that doesn't mean it's not available. "Just ask the butcher, and pre-order whenever possible" is the advice of Tom Koulris, chairman of the American Lamb Board. "Butchers and grocery stores can obtain fresh product quickly from any American lamb supplier anytime of the year."

LAMB PATTIES WITH YOGURT MINT SAUCE

1 pound lean ground lamb
¼ cup chopped fresh mint
¼ cup dry bread crumbs
1 teaspoon lemon pepper

Lightly mix together lamb, bread crumbs, mint, and lemon pepper. Shape into patties. Broil or grill 10 minutes or until desired doneness.

Yogurt Mint Sauce:
⅔ cup plain yogurt
¼ cup firmly packed fresh mint leaves
1 teaspoon sugar

Combine sauce ingredients in a blender or food processor and process until smooth with tiny flecks of mint. Serve sauce over patties.

LAMB LOAF

1½ pounds lean ground lamb
1 cup milk
1 egg beaten
⅔ cup cracker crumbs
¼ cup finely chopped green pepper
¼ cup finely chopped onions
¼ cup ketchup
1 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
¼ teaspoon ground pepper

In 2-quart mixing bowl, combine lamb, milk, egg, cracker crumbs, green pepper, and onions. Mix well. In small bowl, mix together ketchup, salt, Worcestershire sauce, mustard, and pepper. Mix thoroughly. Place lamb mixture in loaf pan or form loaf and place in baking pan. Pour ketchup mixture over lamb. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes to 1 hour, or until done.

CARBONNADE OF LAMB NIMOISE

Layer the following in a glass 9×13-inch dish:
2 slices chopped raw bacon
1 pound cooked lamb, in cubes
1 medium onion, chopped, combined with 1 clove pressed garlic
4 cups diced raw potatoes
2 slices chopped raw bacon
1 green pepper, chopped
1 tomato, chopped (or 1 cup cooked, diced, or stewed tomatoes)
¼ cup freshly chopped parsley, or 4 teaspoons dried parsley.

Sprinkle with salt and pepper and drizzle with olive oil. Cover loosely with aluminum foil and bake at 425 degrees for 20 minutes. Lower heat to 300 degres and bake 1 hour until potatoes are tender. Remove foil. Sprinkle with ¼ cup ~freshly grated Parmesan cheese. Bake 15 minutes longer.

Recipe is from the Languedoc region of France.

~I buy Parmesan or Romano cheeses, grate them, and store in glass jars in my freezer. The Parmesan cheese available all ready grated in the familiar green can at the market has sawdust in it (referred to as "cellulose") to keep it from caking. I prefer the pure cheese.

Shepherds' Ridge Farm

IRISH LAMB STEW

Put 2 tablespoons flour, 1 teaspoon salt, and ⅛ teaspoon pepper into a paper bag. Add 1½ pounds lamb cubes, about 1-inch square, trimmed of fat. Shake to cover lamb with flour mixture. Brown in 3 batches in hot fat. Add ½ teaspoon dill seeds and 3 cups water. Cover and simmer 1½ hours, or until tender.

Add the following:
8 small onions, halved
3 carrots, in 1-inch slices
2 potatoes, cubed (I scrub them and let the skins on for better nutrition).

Cover and cook 25 minutes, or until vegetables are tender. Add 2 cups fresh or frozen peas. Return to heat and cook 5 minutes. Combine ½ cup light cream and 2 tablespoons flour. Stir into stew and cook until thickened.

Shepherds' Ridge Farm

SCOTS' BROTH

3 pounds ground lamb, browned and drained
8 cups water
¼ cup split peas
¼ cup pearl barley

Add water to lamb. Bring to boil and cook 20 minutes. Chill broth overnight and remove congealed fat next day.

Soak peas overnight in water. Drain next day and add to lamb and broth. Add barley and cook for 1½ hours.

Add the following to broth, simmering gently for 1 hour. Stir frequently.
1 large carrot, chopped
1 large onion, chopped
2 leeks, split lengthwise, wash and chop white part and tender green part
2 celery ribs, chopped
1 large peeled turnip, chopped
2 tablespoons chopped parsley

This is a wonderfully hearty and healthful soup, perfect for autumn and winter meals.

Shepherds' Ridge Farm

Lamb is easy to prepare, and one of the leanest red meats one can eat.

Featured Recipe

"Lamb has been our red meat for most of our married life, and for all of my growing up years with my parents," writes a reader who sent in a variety of lamb recipes from Shepherd's Ridge Farm. No additional address or name was attached, but her comments are worth printing.

She writes, "I have heard every comment imaginable about how awful the flavor of lamb is: 'It tastes like the barnyard or wet wool or bumblebees.' "Truly, I didn't know people ate such things so that they could compare the flavor with lamb.

"The most common observation is that you need to know how to cook it.

"Nonsense! Lamb is cooked like any other meat. I have converted my beef recipes to use lamb or mutton — yes, we eat that, too. Lamb is to veal what mutton is to beef — full-flavored and delicious."

The featured recipe is from Shepherd's Ridge Farm. "The combination of ingredients may sound questionable to some, but this is absolutely delicious," the reader writes. She gave this recipe to her husband's cousin who buys lamb from them. The cousin reported the lamb was so good, she wished they had dinner guests to share it with.

FRUITED LAMB CHOPS

6 ¾-inch thick loin lamb chops
¼ cup chopped onions
2 tablespoons olive oil or butter
2 cups stewed tomatoes
½ cup small pieces of mixed dried fruits and berries
¼ cup brown sugar
¾ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon cinnamon
⅛ teaspoon ground allspice
⅛ teaspoon ground cloves
⅛ teaspoon ginger
⅛ teaspoon mace
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg

Shake loins in flour and brown in hot oil. Add onions and saute until onions are tender. Add stewed tomatoes, and dried fruits and berries to lamb chops.

Stir together sugar, salt, pepper, cinnamon, allspice, cloves, ginger, mace, and nutmeg, and add to skillet ingredients. Simmer 20-25 minutes. Sprinkle ¼ cup flour over sauce to thicken. Serve over cooked rice or pasta.

Farm To College Networking

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.) — Have you heard about the "Farm to College" movement?

Colleges and Universities across the nation are looking to local farmers to supply fresh, locally raised products for use in campus dining halls. Ever wondered how these kinds of projects get started? Attend Southeast Regional Farm to College Networking Session to learn more.

On Tuesday, December 9 from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m., PASA (PA Assoc. for Sustainable Ag) will be hosting a southeast regional Farm to College meeting at West Chester University's Graduate Business Center.

Food service directors from the nine-county southeast regions have been invited to meet farmers in the area who might be able to supply a college with fresh, local products. Producers of dairy, meat, produce, or value-added products, are all welcome.

Though this meeting is primarily an opportunity for food service directors and farmers to network, others who may be able to influence a college or university food service purchasing decisions are also welcome to attend. This includes students, professors and citizens with connections to area colleges or universities. The session will not be addressing the K-12 school lunch program.

Farmers interested in supplying the college market should keep these general considerations in mind: Most food services will require a minimum $2 million in liability insurance coverage, some will require more.

Food services interested in local purchasing tend to be willing to substitute a product they are currently using for one purchased locally. For example, most would consider switching from California tomatoes to Pennsylvania tomatoes. However, many will hesitate to try something radically different, like offering water buffalo milk for breakfast.

Food services require regular, predictable deliveries in quantities that match their needs and storage capabilities. This varies from school to school.

Most schools are going to want one-stop-shopping. This means that a school is likely to work only with one farmer or with one cooperative. If there are several farmers in your area who might benefit from cooperating, PASA can offer some organizational assistance.

Most schools will pay more for a product if quality and/or student demand warrants. But price is definitely a consideration and you should be ready to answer. How much more/less does this cost?

If you are interested in attending this meeting, contact Phyllis Laufer (610) 746-1970 at the Northampton County Cooperative Extension.

Women Run The Farm When Hunting Season Opens

CARLA MARTIN
Pennsylvania Dairy Princess

The wind swept the leaves up in a forceful dance to the sky, only to plumet gently back down to earth. Golden rays of sun shown clearly through the bare branches of the trees. Cool, crisp air hung in the atmosphere with no hint of relenting. The fields lay bare, stripped of their produce.

There was no denying that autumn had come to stay, and winter was close behind.

With the season of autumn also comes a sport that many men choose to join, hunting. Although many people think of this sport as fun for men, not many ralize that on a dairy farm it means sacrifice for those left behind. For the years of hunting in our family, when the men took to the woods, it meant the women ran the farm.

Before the sun could peek its shiny head above the horizon, we started out to the barn. My sister was the main girl in charge, and I was her side kick. We started with milking. That was an easy task to do in the dark and a very important one at that. Milking our 100 head of cattle seemed a little more challenging because if anything went wrong, we didn't have dad or my brother to come fix it. We made sure the cooler was on in the milk house and silently hoped nothing would go wrong while the women were in charge.

The next thing to do was feed the cows. This was also challenging, because although we milked often, feeding cows was my brother's job and he rarely needed our help. We were given detailed instructions before the men left as to how much haylage, grain, and silage was needed in the feed mixture.

With that done, the most difficult task was next. We had to drive the tractor into the barn around sharp corners and unload feed into the cows trough. Although it may not sound hard, I found it very challenging I got the tractor stuck in the barn once, but my sister was able to bale me out. I was quite thankful I didn't take the barn down when the women were in charge.

With the cows milked and fed, the two biggest tasks were complete. My sister had to walk the chicken house and pickup the dead chickens and make sure they were getting fed. We had to make sure there were no cows starting into labor, feed the calves at the home farm and the rented farms, scrape the free stall barn, and straw the cows.

After this was all complete it felt as though we had put a whole days work in, but is was only lunch time. In only a few hours we would have to start all over again.

I was glad that hunting season only came once a year, because life was a lot harder when the women were in charge.

This past year while we women kept the fort down, the men were quite successful in their hunt. My brother got an eight-point buck, my dad got a six-point buck, and my brother-in-law got a doe. I don't know if I've ever seen them so excited and thrilled as they were the night they brought home their trophies.

But deep down inside they know that some credit goes to the women in their lives. With out us, there would have been no hunt. Even though they did the hunting, the women at home were in charge of running the dairy farm.

Here is a hunting recipe our family enjoys.

SWISS ELK STEAK

2 pounds elk steak
All-purpose flour
2 tablespoons butter
1 can (15 ounces) tomato sauce
½ cup red wine or beef broth
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
½ cup diced onion
½ cup diced green pepper
1 can (2¼ ounces) sliced ripe olives, drained
1 cup sliced fresh mushrooms
½ teaspoon saltl
½ teaspoon pepper
4 slices Swiss cheese, optional
Cooked noodles

Dredge elk steak lightly in flour; shake off excess. Melt butter in a large skillet; brown steak on both sides. Place in a shallow baking pan. Combine the next nine ingredients; pour over steak. Cover and bake at 350 degrees for 1½ hours or until cooked to desired tenderness. If desired, place cheese over steak before serving. Serve over noodles. Makes 4 servings.

ANSWER — Helen Groff, New Bloomfield, wanted a recipe for Hungarian Goulash to make and serve with cooked noodles. Thanks to Hermie Potts, Pemberton, N.J., for sending one that he uses.

Hungarian Goulash

2 pounds beef chunk, cut up
1 cup onion, chopped
6 tablespoons shortening
1 tablespoon flour
1½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon paprika
8-ounce can tomato sauce
1 minced clove of garlic
2-3 beef bouillon cubes dissolved in 2 cups water

Brown beef, onion, and garlic in shortening until tender. Stir in flour, salt, paprika, and tomato sauce with the 2 cups bouillon broth. Cook 5 minutes or longer, until meat is done. Or, you may bake at 350 degrees for 90 minutes.

ANSWER — A Manheim reader requested recipes suitable for people following the Atkins Diet (high protein, low carbs). Thanks to Sharon DeLorenzo, Catawissa, for sending in recipes. She recommends buy low carb cookbooks written by Fran McCullagh. Another good cookbook to buy is "15-Minute Low Carb Recipes" by Dana Carpender. More will appear on this cookbook in an article, but the cookbook was published by Winds Press and is available for $19.95. Here are recipes from DeLorenzo.

Skillet Chicken Florentine

Olive oil
2-3 boneless, skinless chicken breasts
10-ounce package frozen chopped spinach, thawed
2 cloves garlic, crushed
¼ cup heavy cream
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese

Warm a little olive oil in a heavy skillet, and brown the chicken breasts over medium heat to the point where they just have a touch of gold. Remove the chicken from the skillet.

Add a couple more tablespoons of olive oil, spinach, and garlic, and stir 2-3 minutes. Stir in cream and cheese, and spread mixture evenly over the bottom of skillet. Place the chicken breasts on top, cover, turn the heat to low, and let simmer 15 minutes.

Serve chicken breasts with spinach on top.

Yield: 3 servings each with 5 grams carbohydrates, 3 grams fiber, for a total of 2 grams usable carbs and 33 grams protein.

Those Chicken Things

10 scallions
8-ounces cream cheese, softened
8 boneless, skinless chicken breasts
16-24 slices bacon

Clean, trim, and chop scallions, including a generous portion of the green. Mix the scallions into cream cheese, and set aside.

Butterfly the chicken breasts from the thinnest edge in toward the thickest. (This thickest edge will be the middle of the breast once it is opened up). Working one piece at a time, open the breast up, and put it in a heavy zipper-lock bag. Seal the bag, and with a rolling pin, hammer, dumbell or whatever you can find, pound the chicken breast until it is ¼-inch thick all over. Repeat with remaining chicken breasts.

Once all 8 breasts have been flattened, place an equal amount of the cream cheese and scallion mixture on each. Wrap the chicken meat around the cheese mix so that it is completely enclosed.

Wrap a strip of bacon around the ball of chicken, stretching it a bit to provide maximum overlap. Wrap a second piece of bacon around the still exposed portion of the chicken, again giving it a bit of stretch. Secure with toothpicks. (Depending on the size of the chicken breasts, you may need a third piece of bacon. Most of the chicken should be covered by the bacon strips).

Refrigerate for several hours or overnight until well chilled.

Cover the barbecue rack with aluminum foil, and spray with nonstick cooking spray. (The foil helps prevent flare-ups from the bacon fat and also helps the chicken cook evenly). Preheat the grill to high.

Place the chicken on the covered rack, reduce heat to medium, and close lid. Turn about every five minutes, until all sides are nicely browned. When the cheese starts to ooze out in a few places, the meat is doen. (Depending on the size of the pieces and the overall temperature of the grill, this should take 20-30 minutes). Remove toothpicks and serve.

Yield: 8 servings, each 1 gram carbohydrate, a trace of fiber, and 36 grams protein.

Dilled Chicken Salad

1½ cups cooked chicken, diced
1 large rib celery, diced
½ green pepper, diced
¼ medium, sweet red onion, diced
3 tablespoons mayonaise
3 tablespoons sour cream
1 teaspoon dried dill weed
Salt

Combine chicken (wonderful with turkey too), celery, pepper, and onion in bowl.

In a separate bowl, mix together mayonnaise, sour cream, and dill. Pour the mixture over the chicken and veggies, toss, salt to taste, and serve.

Yield: 2 servings, each with 5 grams carbohydrates and 1 gram fiber, for a total of 4 grams usable carbs and 24 grams protein.

Broccoli Salad

½ cup olive oil
¼ cup vinegar
1 clove garlic, crushed
½ teaspoon Italian seasoning herb blend
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
4 cups fozen broccoli cuts

Whisk together olive oil, vinegar, garlic, herbs, salt and pepper.

Don't bother to thaw the broccoli, just put it in a bowl and pour the olive oil mixture on top. Mix well. Let set for several hours in the refrigerator. Stir occasionally. Serve.

Yield: 6 servings each with 7 grams carbohydrates, 4 grams fiber, for a total of 3 grams usable carbs and 4 grams protein.

Chicken Waldorf Salad

1½ cups diced cooked chicken
½ cup diced apple
2 big ribs celery, diced
½ cup chopped walnuts
⅓ cup mayonnaise

Combine all ingredients, mix well, and serve.

Yield: 2 servings, each with 9 grams carbohydrates and 3 grams fiber, for a total of 6 grams usable carbs and 40 grams protein.

Strawberry Almond Pie

Almold Crust:

Butter for pie plate
1⅓ cups almonds with skins
1 tablespoon sugar
1½ tablespoons Splenda low-calorie sweetener
3 tablespoons butter, softened to room temperature

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Butter a 9-inch pie plate. Place about 6 almonds in food processor and grind to dust; sprinkle the dust over the prepared pie plate. Grind remaining almonds along with the sugar and Splenda but not too finely — it's best to do this in short bursts.

Put the ground sugared almonds into a bowl with soft butter and mix together with fingertips. When you have a sort of dough, press it into the bottom and sides of the pie plate, using the back of a soup spoon to make it as even as possible.

Bake crust 15 minutes — it should just be beginning to brown at the edge. If not, continue baking a few more minutes. When crust is done, let cool to room temperature.

Strawberry Filling

1 quart strawberries, halved
Pinch salt
1 tablespoon flour
Splenda low calorie sweetener to taste, about ¼-½ cup
8 ounces cream cheese
Heavy cream as needed
¼ teaspoon pure vanilla extract

In saucepan, cook strawberries with salt and flour over medium heat, breaking them up a little with a wooden spoon to release their juices. Don't let them scorch. Cook until thickened, like jam, about 10 minutes. Add Splenda to taste and remove from heat. Set aside.

In a food processor, break up cream cheese and beat until it's smooth, adding a little cream as needed. Mix in vanilla.

To assemble the pie, pour the cream cheese mixture over the almond crust and spoon the strawberries on top. Refrigerate the pie at least one hour and up to four hours.

Per serving, carbohydrate: 9.4 gram plus 5.8 grams fiber; protein 7.9 gram, fat 32.8 grams.

ANSWER — Thanks to Elisabeth Keeney for sending in her recipe for hot pockets, which had been requested by Margaret Grieff, Sidman. Keeney writes that she and her husband tasted this recipe when visiting the Russian Mennonite community of Goessel, Ks. Keener writes that this recipe may not be exactly what Grieff was looking for, but the sandwiches in a bun make a wonderful snack or light meal.

Bierocks

¼ cup butter (no substitutes)
¼ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
¾ cup warm milk
1 large egg
3 cups bread flour, more if needed
1 package yeast

Keeney uses her bread machine dough cycle to mix the dough. If you do not use a bread machine, mix the yeast dough. Let rise, punch down, and let rise 20 minutes. Roll out and cut into 4-inch squares. Put ¼ cup of the following meat mixture into each square. Fold edges over and seal. Let rise 15 minutes. Bake in a 350 degree oven for 15 minutes.

Filling:

1 pound ground beef, browned, drained

Saute the following and combine with browned beef:

1 onion, chopped
½ medium head cabbage, chopped
¼ cup butter

ANSWER — Mrs. Philip Miller, Gettysburg, requested a recipe for barley soup. Thanks to Lisa Zimmerman for sending one.

Chicken Barley Soup

2 cups cooked chicken
2 quarts chicken broth
1 cup carrots, diced
1 cup celery, diced
1 chicken bouillon cube
Basil leaves
½ cup barley
½ cup onion, chopped
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon poultry seasoning
½ teaspoon pepper

Soak barley in water for a half day. Drain. Bring chicken broth to a boil. Add barley and remaining vegetables and seasonings. Cook until soft.

ANSWER — A faithful reader from Cumberland County requested doughnut recipes especially the cake type. Thanks to Lisa Zimmerman, for sending one.

Baked Donuts

2 heaping tablespoon yeast
2½ cups warm water

Beat together:

2 eggs
¾ cup sugar
¾ cup margarine
2½ teaspoons salt

Add yeast mixture. Add 4 cups Occident (bread flou). Beat well with mixer. Add 4 more cups flour with spoon into moistened. Do not overbeat.

Refrigerate overnight. Roll out dough and cut out donut shapes. Let rise one hour. Bake at 350 degrees for 10-12 minutes. Don't brown.

Filling:

6 cups confectioners' sugar
⅔ cup warm water
1 cup Crisco shortening
1 teaspoon vanilla
Dash salt

Combine filling ingredients and beat well. Insert in baked donuts.

Variation: Roll and cut out. Let rise one hour. Push down to make a well in center. Put 1 tablespoon cherry pie filling in each. Bake at 350 degrees for 10-12 minutes. Put icing over the top.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

We've had our three grandchildren living with us for several days. Their parents went to the West Coast to celebrate their wedding anniversary. It has been a noisy place as they play games and watch cartoons on television.

Again, I must remind children to comb your hair, tie your shoes, and pick up your things from the floor.

Last week my sister invited all of her sisters to a show at the IMAX theater in Harrisburg. The screen is 10 times larger than a conventional movie. We saw a "Coral Reef Adventure." Some fish are entirely bright blue, others red and some are bright yellow. The octopus was extremely large. My husband and I were allowed to use the elevator to reach our seats. Afterward, the eight of us enjoyed a nice meal in Middletown where an old bank has been converted to a nice restaurant. Here we caught up on news and exchanged pictures.

I've taken my turn teaching the bible study group. It seems that the teacher learns more than the others as you read extra material as background help. We had a good turnout and many women helped with the discussion. I'm always glad when someone else teaches.

Now I must thaw a pork roast for supper as the hungry children will be home from school and want food. I made a platter of sausage and they almost emptied it before it went around the table. Maybe I better bake a big cake too for the evening meal as they always want a snack. It is easy to forget how it was when I packed lunches for myself and six sisters many years ago. They pack their own lunches.

Marietta's Holiday Tour Of Homes Dec. 7

MARIETTA (Lancaster Co.) — For its 38th year, Marietta is lighting the way for visitors to its Annual Holiday Tour of Homes, Sunday, Dec. 7. Candles and twinkling white lights will abound in this quaint town with more than 50 percent of its homes located in a National Historic District. The tour starts at 11 a.m. and lasts until 7 p.m.

A well-preserved example of an early 19th Century industrial town, Marietta has chosen to highlight its restoration efforts by hosting an annual self-guided walking tour of homes. One of the oldest Home Tours in Pennsylvania, it offers visitors a preview of the sights and smells of the season as eight private homes and seven restored public buildings display their holiday spirit. Sponsored by Marietta Restoration Associates (MRA), this event draws thousands of visitors, many from out of state.

Visitors can take the convenient shuttle buses from site to site, although many prefer to walk and view the many other homes in Marietta which are decorated outside for the House Decorating Contest. Winners will be proudly displaying their ribbons, adorning hours of handiwork.

Tour the home of Donald and Joyce Hershey, Riverview Towers built in 1860, during Marietta's annual house tour.

Located along the Susquehanna River, Marietta is centrally located between Lancaster, York, and Harrisburg. Profits from the tour are used to fund continuing restoration projects in Marietta. Ticket price is $10 in advance, $14 day of the tour. Call (717) 426-3056 or 426-1229 for tour or ticket information.

POW's and MIA's... We Should Never Forget.

Amidst their hardships and tribulations, America's fighting men and women have always taken comfort in their favorite songs of faith. These songs have helped to keep strong their belief in their God, and their love for their country, which has asked of them great sacrifices for the sake of their fellow Americans. To serve these wonderful men and women Cristy Lane worked more than 120 shows in Vietnam during the Vietnam War. It was Cristy's way of keeping faith with the troops, at a time when many Americans were turning their backs on them. As long as she lives, she will never forget the faces of these young men and women. On August 27, 2003 the VFW formally inducted Cristy into the VFW Hall of Fame in San Antonio at their National Convention. And now Cristy Lane is proud to present a special CD of songs of faith to our Veterans of Foreign Wars, many of whom she met in the jungles of Southeast Asia.

These are the most requested songs of faith of all time, including Cristy's #1 country hit from 1980, the timeless classic, "One Day At A Time." These songs have been selected especially for you, America's veterans, who know so well the meaning of faith, and the value of a great song of faith.

God bless and take it one day at a time.

—Cristy

Cooks Question Corner

N.Y., requested a recipe for dog bones. Thanks to Elisabeth Keener, Chambersburg, for sending a recipe, which she writes: "Our dogs give these two paws up rating."

Dog Biscuits

1 package yeast
1¼ cups warm chicken broth
2 tablespoons molasses

Combine broth and molasses. Stir in yeast. Add the following:

2 cups white flour
1½ cups whole wheat flour
½ cup corn meal
1 cup cracked wheat
½ cup powdered milk
2 teaspoons garlic powder
1 teaspoon salt

Knead dough as if making bread. Roll out dough to ½-inch thickness. Cut into desired shapes.

Brush the following mixture over the tops of biscuits:

1 beaten egg
1 tablespoon milk

Bake at 300 degrees for 45 minutes. Turn off oven and allow biscuits to dry overnight in oven.

This mixture can also be mixed and kneaded in a bread machine.

Cathy Stewart said tea parties offer the perfect background to teach table manners to children.

Have A Children's Tea Party

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Tea parties are not only for girls. Boys love tea parties, too, according to Cathy Stewart, who has two children of her own and teaches other children.

Recently, Cathy set up several little tables at the Lebanon County holiday program to demonstrate how delightful and unique tea parties can be for children.

The teddy bear picnic tea party is for guests to bring their favorite teddy bears.

It's a place to eat "beary" good sandwiches by using a cookie cutter to cut bear shapes out of white bread. Fill some sandwiches with peanut butter and honey, and other sandwiches with slices of cheese and meat. Use mustard to decorate faces on cheese sandwiches.

Tea parties are great places to learn tea manners, such as the following:

- Don't start serving until everyone is seated.
- At a formal tea, the hostess pours the tea for everyone. At an informal gathering, set out a couple of teapots and allow guests to help themselves.
- When finished stirring your tea, place your teaspoon on the saucer.
- Put your napkin on your lap. Blot or pat your lips when needed.
- Don't drink if your mouth has food in it.
- Remember to say "Please" and "Thank you" when asking for food and passing dishes.
- At the table, pass dishes to your right.
- Sit up straight and don't tip the chair.

Another idea is to have a Mad Hatter tea party. Choose the "maddest hat." Ask the guests to vote for whom has the maddest hat, the most creative, most beautiful, and silliest of the tea party.

The one who wins can be the honorary Mad Hatter.

Tea Party Games

Caterpillar's Musical Toadstools

This game is a variation of musical chairs.

Have a footstool or step stool for each guest. If you don't have enough stools, cut mushroom shapes out of paper and place on floor. Start with one stool short, and play music for about 30 seconds. Have each child quickly sit on a toadstool. Remove one toadstool after each game. The last child on a stool wins the game.

Garden Scavenger Hunt

Before the party, write a list of things you could find outdoors such as rocks, leaves, a weed, flower, and so forth. If children cannot read, use stickers or draw pictures for each item.

Divide children into groups. Include the list, pencil, and a bag.

Dinner And Storytime With Mrs. Claus And Yummie

INTERCOURSE (Lancaster Co.) — Kitchen Kettle Village is a great place for kids at Christmastime. This season the Kettle Cafe, located on the Village Grounds, is hosting a "Dinner and Storytime with Mrs. Claus and Yummie" on the Fridays before Christmas, Dec. 5, 12, and 19 beginning at 6 p.m. During each one-hour event Mrs. Claus will tell a holiday story, and will personally give each child attending a special gift. And Yummie, the Village mascot who greets children throughout the year, will delight those attending with his own special antics.

The menu features two dinner options, each priced at $6, plus there will be a "Grab 'N Go" food section available for adults. Reservations, which are required, can be made by calling Corie at (717) 768-2706.

Kitchen Kettle Village, home to 39 crafts, food and artisan shops, is located on Rt. 340 in the Village of Intercourse, 10 miles east of Lancaster. During the holidays the Village is open 9 a.m.-5 p.m., Monday-Thursday, Fridays 9 a.m.-9 p.m., and Saturday (Holly Days) 9 a.m.-5:30 p.m. A full roster of live concerts, food and craft demonstrations, and special kids activities are also scheduled each weekend, Nov. 28-Dec. 20 that are open free to the public, and there is plenty of free parking on the Village Grounds.

For more information, contact Kitchen Kettle Village, Rt. 340, Intercourse, PA 17534. Telephone (800) 732-3538. Or log on to www.kitchenkettle.com.

Christmas Magic At Rocky Ridge County Park

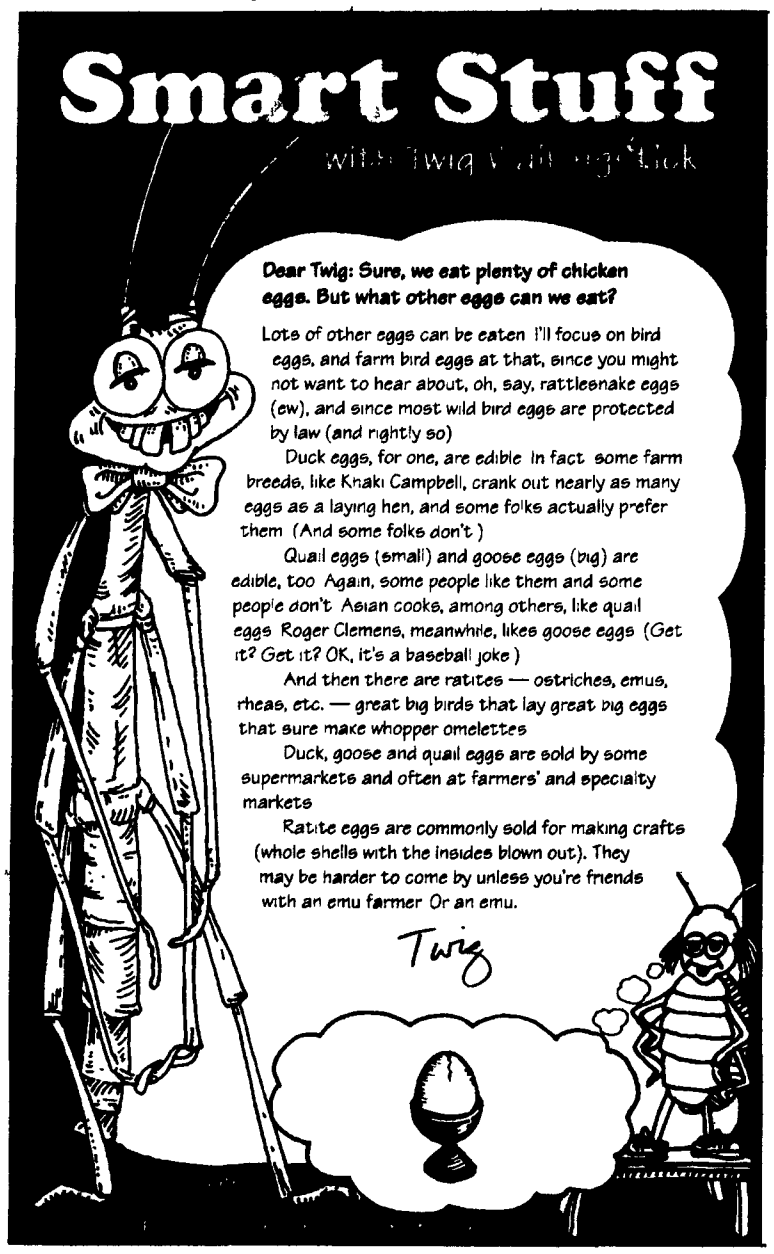
YORK (York Co.) — Christmas Magic — A Festival of Lights takes place at Rocky Ridge County Park, York, from now through Dec. 31. Christmas Magic will be closed Dec. 24 and 25. The hours are Monday through Friday 6 p.m. until 9 p.m.; Saturday and Sunday 5 p.m. until 9 p.m. Adult admission is $5, children ages 4-12 are $3, children three and under are free and senior citizens are $4. A group rate of $4 per adult is available for groups having 12 or more adults.

There are 250,000 dazzling lights spread over a one-half mile walking trail that meanders through a mature oak forest that has been transformed into a magical Christmas wonderland.

This holiday festival has hosted more than 411,000 visitors since its opening in 1984. There are 250,000 dazzling lights spread over a one-half mile walking trail that is handicapped accessible. The trail meanders through a mature oak forest that has been transformed into a magical Christmas wonderland.

As you stroll along enjoying the holiday music, you will find theme areas including Disney characters, dinosours, farm animals, snowpeople, a light volcano and stream, lake with skaters and much, much more. Along the trail are five enclosed buildings with cozy fires burning. They house adorable animated holiday scenes, an elaborate toy train display by the Susquehanna Valley Garden Railroad Society, hot food and crafts. The York County Heritage Trust will provide a sleigh scene.

Bring a canned good to donate to the York County Parks Ranger Division food drive. Inclement weather may close the trail nightly. For trail updates or for more information call our 24-hour voice mail at (717) 840-7440.



Smart Stuff
Dear Twig: Sure, we eat plenty of chicken eggs. But what other eggs can we eat?
Lots of other eggs can be eaten I'll focus on bird eggs, and farm bird eggs at that, since you might not want to hear about, oh, say, rattlesnake eggs (ew), and since most wild bird eggs are protected by law (and rightly so)
Duck eggs, for one, are edible In fact some farm breeds, like Khaki Campbell, crank out nearly as many eggs as a laying hen, and some folks actually prefer them (And some folks don't)
Quail eggs (small) and goose eggs (big) are edible, too Again, some people like them and some people don't Asian cooks, among others, like quail eggs Roger Clemens, meanwhile, likes goose eggs (Get it? Get it? OK, it's a baseball joke)
And then there are ratites — ostriches, emus, rheas, etc. — great big birds that lay great big eggs that sure make whopper omelettes
Duck, goose and quail eggs are sold by some supermarkets and often at farmers' and specialty markets
Ratite eggs are commonly sold for making crafts (whole shells with the insides blown out). They may be harder to come by unless you're friends with an emu farmer Or an emu.

Gravel or stones
Greenery (fern fronds, ivy vines, autumn leaves, evergreens)
Tea lights or small votive candles

Select size and shape of container desired for finished lantern.

Choose a second, smaller container (a plastic beverage works well). Use scissors to cut off top of smaller container. Make this container about the same height as the larger container. Set aside.

Fill the large container with water to a depth of approximately one inch. Place a few stems of greenery in water. Place the container in freezer until solid. Make sure it is setting level.

Set the smaller container on the frozen water. Place gravel or small stones in the smaller container to anchor it to the bottom. Arrange greenery around the container. Fill the container with water and place in freezer. You may find it helpful to float ice cubes on top of the water to hold the greenery under water, but it's not necessary to do so.

Unmold the ice lantern with cool or lukewarm water. Remove the stones from the inner container, fill it with lukewarm water, and allow to set a few minutes. The small container should slide out with a gentle tug.

Turn the large container upside down in the sink and run lukewarm water over it. The lantern should slide out. Store the lantern in the freezer until needed.

When desired, remove the lantern from freezer and set a small tea light or votive candle inside.

VINE OF LIGHTS

Small, ornamental gourds
Small Mexican luffa gourds
Basin with water
Metal kitchen scrub pad
Clear spray lacquer or clear acrylic varnish
Brown floral tape
Floral wire
Strand of 10 lights, C5 or C7 patio lights
Dried leaves
Pencil
Sharp kitchen knife with serrated blade
Keyhold or hobby saw
Power drill with assorted drill bits, 1⅜2 or 7⅛6-inch

Soak the small gourds in warm water for up to 15 minutes, then scrub off any mold and dirt with the metal scrub pad. Allow gourds to dry.

Estimate the diameter of a light bulb and socket on the light strand. Select a drill bit that is the same or slightly larger size than the diameter of the bulb and socket to check fit. If using larger light bulbs, a sharp kitchen knife with a serrated blade can be used to make the hold.

Using the 1⅜2-inch drill bit, drill a hole on either side of the hole you drilled earlier.

Use a variety of drill bit sizes to drill additional holes in the gourd. The number of holes created will determine the amount of light the gourd emits. Shake out the small seeds from the gourds. Save them for next year's crop.

Spray the drilled ornamental gourds with lacquer or acrylic varnish. Allow to dry.

Crack the thin shells of the luffa gourds and peel them to expose the fibrous interior. Set aside. Cut out interior fiber so light bulb will fit into gourd.

Starting at the plug end of the light strand, wrap the strand with brown floral tape. Stop wrapping just before the first light socket.

Thread a short length of floral wire through the tiny holes at the top of each gourd. Insert a bulb and socket in the top hole of each gourd. Secure the gourd to the strand, twisting the ends of the floral wire together. Continue wrapping with floral tape. Using floral tape, cover the twisted ends of wire. Tape leaves to light strand.

Slip luffa gourds over the light bulbs along the strand. Alternate luffa gourds and the drilled ornamental gourds along the light strand as desired.

Pennsylvania Christmas Show Opens Wednesday, Dec. 3

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The 20th Annual Pennsylvania Christmas and Gift Show will be open from Wednesday, Dec. 3 to Sunday, Dec. 7 at the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg.

The event is reportedly one of the largest Christmas Shows on the East Coast. Over 700 exhibit booths laden with Christmas gifts are available to shoppers.

Exhibitors, crafters, and vendors have all been working feverishly to have their special gifts and one-of-a-kind items ready for all who come to shop. Some of the many thousands of gift ideas include arts and crafts, clothing, jewelry, leather goods, toys, flowers, tree ornaments, stocking stuffers, hand-crafted furniture, and much, much more. Many things are hard-to-find gift items that just can't be purchased anywhere else.

Shoppers can take a break to see the 100-foot train display sponsored by the Reading Company Technical and Historical Society. They put together a platform with three to five sets of trains running simultaneously.

To give home decorating ideas, the show offers many decorated Christmas trees — all with different themes. Continuous daily Craft Demonstrations and Cooking Clinics take place throughout the day. Olde Christmas Village contains twenty-one life-sized decorated buildings and eight tents.

General Admission tickets are $6 each. Admission for Senior Citizens over 62 is $4. There is no admission charge for children under 12 when accompanied by parents.

For more information, call Dick or Pattie Mahoney (717) 233-5100 or (610) 565-0313. Website: www.pachristmasshow.com.

Wayne County 4-H Onion Round-Up

The 2003 Wayne County 4-H Onion Round-Up was conducted Oct. 14 at the extension office in the Courthouse, Honesdale.

Christopher Rickard (Cherry Ridge 4-H Club) had the only exhibit of 4-H onions. He was awarded a blue ribbon, a division champion rosette and a grand champion rosette for an outstanding exhibit of red onions.

Ginny Davitt of Davitt's Nursery, Honesdale, was the judge.

Wayne Co. 4-H Horse Projects

Wayne County 4-H Horse Production project members participated in the 2003 Central Pennsylvania Area 4-H Breed Show, Aug. 13, at the Williamsport Riding Club, Williamsport.

Dr. Clinton Depew, Louisiana State University, served as judge for this 4-H breed show.

Wayne County 4-H horse production project participants were: Christina L. Newport (Korral Kids 4-H Club), blue ribbon — appaloosa yearling gelding and red ribbon — English Pleasure/ 3-year-old Pleasure Futurity. Timmy Meyer (Horse Lovers 4-H Club), blue ribbon — paint yearling colt. Ambrosia Eve Yorn (Future Outfitters 4-H Club), red ribbon — paint yearling filly. Amanda White (Trailblazers 4-H Club), red ribbon — paint yearling filly, red ribbon — stock-type horse — two-year-old gelding and entries in Western Pleasure — two-year-old Pleasure Futurity and four-year-old Pleasure futurity. George Millen (Future Outfitters 4-H Club), red ribbon paint — two-year-old filly. Megan Welles (Future Outfitters 4-H Club), red ribbon pinto — two-year-old filly. Annie Martzen (Chaps and Breeches 4-H Club), red ribbon — welsh pony — yearling colt. Ashleigh Richardson (Future Outfitters 4-H Club), red ribbon — stock-type horse — yearling gelding. Kyla Drinkwater (Horse Lovers 4-H Club), entry in stock-type horse yearling filly.

York County Lamb Club

The York County lamb Club conducted its most recent meeting Saturday, Sept. 6, at the York Fairgrounds after the last event for the Junior Sheep Show for the 2003 Fair. Everyone enjoyed the creative and funny skits from the lead line and sheep decorator shows that traditionally end the Junior show.

All Club members who were involved in shows that day attended the meeting to discuss sale activities and the new livestock arenas that were used for the first time ever at the 2003 fair. The club also signed "thank you" cards to all of their sponsers.

As a reward for the hard work of the past summer, the owners of the Champion and Reserve lambs, Sarah Doyle and Rick Jones, treated the Club to ice cream.

Wayne County 4-H Potato Round-Up

The 2003 Wayne County 4-H Potato Round-Up was conducted Oct. 14 at the extension office in Honesdale.

Natasha Brown, (Tri-Gal 4-H Club), had the grand champion 4-H potato exhibit. Christopher Rickard, (Cherry Ridge 4-H Club), had the reserve grand champion.

The 4-H Potato Round-Up was judged by Ginny Davitt, Davitt's Nursery, Honesdale, and a master gardener.

White Potatoes: Blue, division champion, and grand champion — Natasha Brown; Blue and reserve division champion — Christopher Rickard; and Red ribbon — Stephanie Martzen (Cherry Ridge 4-H Club).

Wayne County 4-H Turkey Round-Up

The 2003 Wayne County 4-H Turkey Round-Up took place Nov. 5 at the Wayne County Cooperative Extension Office in the Courthouse, Honesdale.

Eric Diehl, a member of the Tri-Gal 4-H Club, had the grand champion exhibit of dressed 4-H turkeys. Eric's pair of dressed 4-H turkeys tipped the scales at 18.25 pounds and 18.50 pounds and earned an exhibit score of 18.5 points out of a possible 20 points on the judge's scorecard. They were also the intermediate division champions.

Ryan Diehl, a member of the Tri-Gal 4-H Club, had the reserve grand champion exhibit of turkeys. Ryan's pair of dressed 4-H turkeys weighed in at 16.25 pounds and 18.50 pounds and earned an exhibit score of 18.1 points out of a possible 20 points on the judge's scorecard. They were also the senior division champions.

Judging criteria for this 4-H dressed turkey round-up included: had to weigh at least 12 pounds; exhibit an abundance of dressed poultry meat including a long, wide breast, plump, meaty drumsticks and thighs and an acceptable covering of fat on the dressed carcass.

Each dressed turkey was also to be packaged, tied and trussed to enhance "eye appeal" and poultry sales.

Mumaw Cherishes Peanut Butter Heritage, Childhood Treasures

GAY BROWNLEE
Virginia Correspondent

HARRISONBURG, Va. — Grace Mumaw says the best peanut butter of all is derived from only two ingredients — peanuts and salt.

That's a truth she learned from relatives who, for more than half of the 20th century, owned and operated Mosemann's Peanut Butter in Lancaster, from 1910-1964.

Although the business is no longer in existence, its history continues to play a role in Mumaw's life. She is happy to possess four original Mosemann's peanut butter cans in graduated sizes to remind her of her family heritage.

Mosemann's was founded by Harry Mosemann, but John H. Mosemann, a brother, soon took it over.

John H. was Mumaw's maternal grandfather, who died in 1938.

Making and selling peanut butter started as a sideline addition to the smoked meat and cheese commodities that Mosemanns offered at the market in the city of Lancaster in the early years. Paul Mosemann, John's son, saw that peanut butter had great marketing potential and worked to successfully develop that aspect of the business.

According to information found in an article taken from The Sunday News, Nov. 6, 1988, the cans of peanut butter were delivered by express to city outlets from the 19 Locust St. headquarters. Then, at 25-cents a pound, Mosemann's Peanut Butter could be purchased in any desired amount. The sales person used a paddle to scoop out orders onto a piece of parchment paper. It was then weighed and wrapped for the customer.

Mosemann's peanut butter was produced in Lancaster from 1910 to 1964. The popular spread was sold in variously sized cans or custom scooped onto parchment paper and wrapped. The cans pictured here are memorabilia belonging to Grace Mumaw of Harrisonburg. Her grandfather, John H. Mosemann, owned Mosemann's prior to the business being transferred to her Uncle Paul Mosemann.

A former advertisement reads: 'Mosemann Peanut Butter is making quite a sputter. Its quality is without peer, making friends far and near. If you wish to make a test, line it up with all the rest."

In the 1920s a move to Mulberry Street streamlined the production of peanut butter. Roasting the peanuts was continuous.

Every hour 1,800 pounds of peanuts could be processed and for a time 700,000 pounds of peanut butter would be sold in a month. The market went south to Florida, west to Ohio and north to New York.

By 1928 peanut butter was the sole concentration. The smoked meat and cheese business was sold.

Both farmers and oil mills benefited from two peanut butter by-products. For filler and livestock bedding, farmers bought the red skins that were shoveled into burlap bags after first being removed by a method of air suction. The oil mills, meanwhile, were interested in the fat contained in the heart, or germ, of the peanut.

Despite the company's continued development during the Depression Era, the rise of supermarkets hurt the business as patrons gravitated more and more to them instead of the small neighborhood markets.

Twice a year John R. Mumaw and Esther (Mosemann) Mumaw, his wife, would drive with their daughters northeast through the Shenandoah Valley, taking about six hours to arrive at Lancaster from their Park View home outside of Harrisonburg.

At Lancaster they would stock up with a full case (24 jars) of peanut butter.

Back home between slices of bread, the Mumaw girls often added lettuce, bananas, applebutter, apple slices, jelly or old-fashioned molasses to their peanut butter sandwiches.

Mumaw is still hooked on peanut butter. She said she looks for a brand that uses only peanuts and salt. This type when unsealed will have a little layer of oil on top.

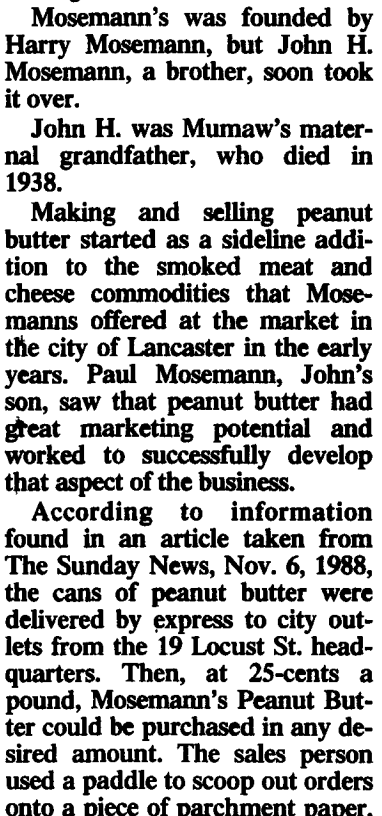
"We still like peanut butter, especially Smuckers, because its just peanuts and salt," Mumaw says. "It separates but once you mix it up, it stays mixed if put in the refrigerator."

Mumaw also cherishes other items reminiscent of her past. Christmas 1938 was the last time Mumaw received a doll. She was then eight years old. The wee china tea set she keeps tucked away in its original box was a gift from her sister Helen who had drawn her name for the 1938 family gift exchange. Its price was 39 cents.

Mumaw recalls that she and her sisters, Helen, Catherine, Lois, and Miriam, on occasion, substituted live kitty cats for baby dolls when playing house. They dressed the felines carefully in doll clothes and carried them to "church" on the front steps, whereupon, young Catherine commenced to deliver a strong message on sin.

It's memories such as these that Mumaw cherishes.

Grace Mumaw examines a tiny tea set from a long ago Christmas when in a gift exchange, her sister, Helen, drew her name.



Pictured is Grace Mumaw's doll from Christmas 1938. The little chair Mumaw uses to display the doll was one she and four sisters might have used growing up in the village of Park View, Va.

To show its dainty porcelain feet, owner Grace Mumaw pulls the dark wool skirt aside on a vintage doll made between 1912 and 1914. The head and arms are also porcelain.

THE ANTIQUE DETECTIVE

American Powder Horns, Flasks, Historical, Collectible

You may be surprised to learn that early 19th century American powder horns and flasks still come to auctions and shows. When they do prices range from a low $200 to more than $3,000. Usually they turn up at firearms and militaria auctions and shows. Several interesting examples sold at the October James Julia Auction.

Powder horns and flasks were just as important to settlers and hunters as to soldiers. Collectors look for the one-of-a-kind made before 1830. Early materials used include horn, ivory, copper, pewter, mother-of-pearl and engraved brass.

After 1830 they were mass produced of die-stamped metal.

Some of the simplest, made by their owners, merely have a date and named. Others featured geometric designs as well as nature symbols. The designs were filled in with colors made from berries, nuts and ink.

To decorate the horns designs were traced on before cutting with a knife or engraving tool. Especially collectible and expensive are the map horns. It was common for military officers to have maps of forts and settlements engraved on their horns.

Often uniformed figues and weapons are engraved with the maps. Any dates refer to the date the horn was finished. Some horns are also engraved with the name, company and regiment of soldiers. Since this carving of the intricate designs was time consuming, in the 18th century soldiers did the carving in their spare time.

Most of the horn powder flasks made in America came from the ox.

The horns were light, yet tough. Because they were waterproof they could easily be recovered if they were dropped in the water during a battle. In the early days of the Republic, tannery owners sold horns or gave them gratis to purchasers of hides. The quality of horns account for their survival 200 years later.

Some of the finer examples have tight-fitting nozzle caps of silver or pewter.

Not every horn was the same size or shape. Small ones held fine grained powder.

Others were flattened in hot water to fit into a pouch. Storage horns could be as large as 20 inches. The later die-stamped metal powder flasks are a specialty in themselves. Their shapes and designs vary widely. Even though they were mass made their designs were individualistic. Metals used were of copper, brass, German silver, zinc, Britannia metal, and tin. Designs became more ornate as manufacturers competed.

The development of breech-loading guns made the power horn obsolete not only from a military standpoint, but also marked the end of an early American carving art form.

CLUES: Reproductions and replicas abound. Two were labeled as replicas at the Julia auction. They were carved and dated. During the Bicentennial horn examples with elaborate carving and dated "1776" were made in Spain.

They can sell at auction for more than $3,000. Although horns are made in many countries, those made in America bring top dollar here.

Red Angus Juniors Meet In The Carolinas

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — The Junior Red Angus Association of America (JRA) held the11th annual Junior Round-Up, June 23-28, headquartered in Charlotte, North Carolina.

Round-Up is the annual educational and leadership event held for the JRA membership, and the location rotates to various parts of the country.

The annual JRA business meeting, board meeting, committee meetings, and national officer elections are conducted during Round Up as well as a variety of contests including cattle evaluation, Team Sales, Stockman's Quiz and Equipment Identification, Print Advertising, Scrapbook and Poster competitions. This year's event also included a JRA Talent/Variety Show.

This year's theme, "Cruisin' the Carolinas," was appropriately termed as Juniors from 14 states and Canada traveled to attend the five day event which included ranch tours, Red Angus and beef industry educational seminars, competition in national JRA contests and many opportunities to have fun.

Highlighting Round-Up were tours of Bull Hill Ranch, Gray Court, S.C.; LongBow Farms, Walkertown, N.C.; North Carolina State University College of Veterinary Medicine; TX Enterprises, Welcome, N.C.; The Richard Childress Racing Museum, Welcome, N.C.; and Carowinds Amusement Park, Charlotte, N.C.

The 2004 Red Angus Junior Round-Up will be held in California. Based in Sacramento, the five day event will include stops at UC Davis, McPhee Red Angus, Monteray Bay, and MMI Genomics. To register for Round-Up, or for more information about the Junior Red Angus program, contact Dawn Bernhard, Junior Programs Coordinator, 2003 190th St., Algona, IA 50511, (515) 679-4006.

Experts Discuss Dangers And Opportunities From Global Warming

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Falling crop production resulting from extreme weather events, diseases and pest infestations increasingly will be fueled by global warming and create an uncertain future for U.S. agricultural production and the nation's food supplies, according to leading experts this week at a Harvard Medical School Center for Health and the Global Environment briefing.

The Civil Society Institute, the Energy Foundation and the National Environmental Trust hosted the event which was followed by a congressional staff briefing sponsored by Sen. Harkin (D-IA), Sen. Brownback (R-KS), Sen. Bill Nelson (D-NE) and Sen. Lugar (R-IN).

Not all the views from the experts were gloomy. Some noted that the impact of global warming can be lessened — and even turned into a boon for agricultural producers — if farmers take such steps as setting up wind farms, engaging in the production of "biodiesel" and ethanol fuels and participating in carbon sequestration programs.

Eric Chivian, director of the Center for Health and the Global Environment at Harvard Medical School said: "Since the 1970s, U.S. agricultural productivity has grown, but it has also experienced greater variability that has been, in part, climate-related.

William Easterling, professor of agronomy and director of the Institutes of the Environment at Penn State University said: 'Climate variability continues to exert large year-to-year swings in U. S. crop yields and production in spite of technology-driven gains in crop productivity over the 20th century.

Among the big concerns for farmers when it comes to climate change: more pests and diseases. X.B. Yang, associate professor of plant pathology at Iowa State University said: 'Climate change will greatly impact plant diseases and pests because climate dictates their occurrence. Literature in plant pathology has shown that pandemics of pests are associated with extreme weather events.

However, global warming also could work to the advantage of some farmers, according to Charles W. Rice, professor of soil microbiology at Kansas State University. He noted: 'Agriculture can help solve (the CO2) problem (through participation in carbon sequestration programs. After harvest, the organic carbon in residues and roots is deposited in the soil, where portions can remain for long periods.

U.S. farms also could serve as a major source of alternative energy supplies, including wind farming and biodiesel production. American Corn Growers Foundation CEO Dan McGuire said: 'Renewable energy, including wind, ethanol and biodiesel offers the means to improve the environment and make our country more energy independent and secure while enhancing the rural and national economy. The Department of Energy and the U.S. Department of Agriculture have calculated carbon dioxide reductions of 78 percent for biodiesel when compared with petroleum diesel in a full life cycle analysis. Biodiesel also reduces air pollutants linked to cancer by 80-90 percent vs. petroleum diesel."

Land O'Lakes Provides Grant To Pa.'s Ag Mobile Classroom

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.) — Producers representing Land O'Lakes Foundation presented a $5,000 grant to the Pennsylvania Mobile Ag Science Lab, a joint venture between the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau and Pennsylvania Friends of Agriculture Foundation, during the lab's "christening" at Penn State's Ag Progress Days in Rockspring.

The Land O'Lakes Foundation grant is one of several grants used to help fund teacher curriculums, educational supplies, lessons plans, and maintenance for the mobile lab classroom during the the 2003-2004 school year.

"The mobile lab provides a tremendous opportunity for our farmer-owned cooperative to fund something that will probably do more to preserve Pennsylvania agriculture than most any other venture we pursue," said John R. Hess, president of the Adams County Farm Bureau and a Land O'Lakes member from Gettysburg, who applied for the grant. "It's money well spent to help get the agricultural story out to children who are four or five times removed from the farm, while at the same time advancing consumers' perception of agriculture."

Plans are to schedule mobile lab visits to schools in Adams, Cumberland, Franklin, and Fulton counties during the 2003-2004 school year, with additional ag lab units added across the state as the first one becomes fully utilized. Able to educate 900 students — and involve 30 teachers — per week, the mobile classroom will target elementary and middle school-aged students.

"Pennsylvania's mobile classroom is modeled after existing mobile labs operating in five states, where they have been very well received," said Jayanna Kopp, Pennsylvania Farm Bureau communications director.

The grant to the Mobile Ag Science Lab is one of several 2003 Land O'Lakes Foundation grants provided through Land O'Lakes Mid-Atlantic grant program.

New Pioneer Program Offers Seed Products For Growers' Needs

DES MOINES, Iowa — Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc. has announced the Pioneer IndustrySelect program, an effort that identifies high-performing products with specialized grain traits that growers can plant to meet end-user demand.

Nearly 200 Pioneer® brand corn products, ranging from comparative relative maturities (CRM) of 95 to 120, have been identified for the IndustrySelect program. The products are widely adapted, and their grain characteristics match the needs of end users in specific geographies. The program leverages Pioneer product development experitise and high-yielding, proprietary genetics with industry-leading knowledge of grain composition and end-user needs.

"This isn't a one-product-fits-all approach," said Russ Sanders, account management director at Pioneer in Johnston, Iowa. "The hybrids must offer the agronomic package and yield potential growers demand, along with the specifically required end-use grain characteristics.

"Because most IndustrySelect products are leader hybrids, they're already being planted on growers' farms across the country," Sanders added. "Pioneer® hybrids 33P67, 33B51 and 34H32, for example, fit the designation of HTF (high total fermentables), which can offer as much as a four percent increase in dry-grind ethanol production compared to commodity corn."

Handles your biggest spreading jobs

The New Holland Model 195 box spreader is up to your biggest spreading jobs.

- Capacity. The "195" takes on 410 bushels (440 cu. ft.) without flinching.
- Strong construction. Corrosion-resistant steels last and last. And an HDPE floor means smooth unloading, even in cold weather.
- Bonded Protection warranty. If the polyethylene floor fails or the sides rust, you'll get new ones FREE for 12 years.
- Fast clean out... even with this big-capacity strong box.
- Large tandem oscillating wheels... allow faster ground speeds in rough terrain, with less ground compaction.

Small spreader hauls 161 bushels

The New Holland Model 130 box spreader does a lot of work for its size, because it has the same built-in toughness of the larger models.

- Corrosion-resistant steel sides, heavy-duty plastic floor planks - backed by 12-Year Bonded Protection.
- T-rod apron chains require less adjustment, allow better cleanout.
- Sturdy A-frame hitch pulls from far under the spreader.

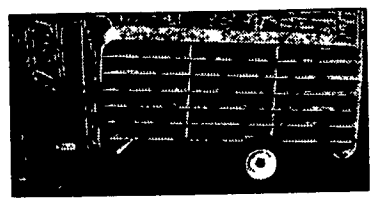
Winkel Mfg. Offers 32 Panel Carrier

GLEN ELDER, Kan. — Combining Winkel ingenuity and craftsmanship, the Winkel 32 unit panel carrier is easy to load and unload for quick set-up in any field conditions.

The trailer features include a spring-loaded panel locking system, 2-inch ball hitch and a swivel jack for easy hook-up. The panels are secured in front with loop and pin while each panel is held in place by individual steel posts that aligns with hinge of panel.

The back end is held with shackle-end chain and boomer, all complete with unit.



Winkel Panel Carrier

The carrier is constructed of 4-inch-by-4-inch square tubing with extension tongue and 2-inch-by-4-inch axle. For more information and to receive Winkel's complete line catalog (800) 466-3606.

Angus Business Remains Strong In Fiscal 2003

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — The American Angus Association and its entities chalked up a solid business year in fiscal 2003, which ended Sept. 30. Sales of Certified Angus Beef® products climbed to more than 580 million pounds and registrations of Angus cattle totaled 281,734 for the year.

"We're very pleased with the year end figures for the Association and its entities," said John Crouch, executive vice president of the American Angus Association. "It's obvious that our members and their commercial customers continue to put their faith in Angus genetics and in the programs and services provided by our organization."

Registrations of Angus cattle for the year were 281,734, just 231 less than were processed in 2002. Transfers, which represent sales of cattle to new owners, were up for the year at 165,963, an increase of nearly one percent.

Membership figures for the year included 2,915 new regular members and 1,407 new junior members, down just slightly in both areas.

Electronic submission of data to the Association has become the preferred way of doing business for a large percentage of members. During the year, more than 43 percent of total registrations, a 28 percent increase from fiscal 2002, and more than half of weaning and yearling weights were submitted electronically for processing. Data is submitted by members with the help of Angus Information Management Software (AIMS) and AAA Login, which is a service available on www.angus.org.

Sales of Certified Angus Beef® products continued to climb, passing the half billion pounds mark for the fourth year in a row and maintaining the CAB position as the largest breed-based branded beef program in the world. Annual sales of 580 million pounds have been projected, an 8 percent increase from the previous year. Of that total, retail licensees sold a projected 294 million pounds and food service licensees sold a projected 167 million pounds. International sales contributed 89 million pounds to the projected total.

Licensees also found success in offering CAB prime products, selling more than 6 million pounds for an increase of 135 percent from a year ago. Value added products, which includes heat-and-serve entries, deli meats, frankfurters and sausages, continued to grow with more than 12 million pounds in sales, an increase of 20 percent for the year.

"As the Certified Angus Beef® brand celebrates its 25th anniversary with record sales, it is exciting to see the innovative concept started by visionary Angus producers set the gold standard for branding in the beef industry," said Jim Riemann, president of CAB. "Our mission to increase the demand for registered Angus cattle is being met and cattlemen are being rewarded for producing high quality beef products."

More than 12 million head of cattle were visually identified as being eligible for CAB. Of those cattle, 2.2 million head met Certified Angus Beef® product specifications for a 17.6 percent acceptance rate.

Reports of sales of Angus cattle were steady from a year ago as well. Reports from consignment, production and dispersal sales that were attended by regional managers representing the Association showed average prices of bulls at $2,241 and females at $2,545, with an overall average of $2,355.

Angus breeders continue to focus on making genetic improvement in their herd through the Angus Herd Improvement Records (AHIR) program. Total data submitted to the AHIR program was up 3.4 percent for the year, which included 298,419 birth weights, 294,954 weaning weights, and 147,638 yearling weights. That data was submitted by 8,281 herds, which is a 3.3 percent increase in participation.

Angus breeders continue to use ultrasound technology to gather body composition measurements in their herds as well, with data submitted on 95,958 animals, a 14.4 percent increase for the year. That data came from 2,502 herds, a 16.3 percent increase in participation.

The Angus Foundation also enjoyed growth in fiscal year 2003, providing more than $40,000 in scholarships to Angus youth and supporting educational and leadership programs for members of the National Junior Angus Association and other projects that benefit the breed.

Mycogen Sweeps Corn Silage Category At World's Forage Analysis Superbowl

MADISON, Wis. — Mycogen hybrids won all 20 of the top 20 corn silage placings in the 2003 World's Forage Analysis Superbowl.

In addition, Mycogen growers receied honors as grand champion of the Dairy Corn Silage division and grand champion first time entrant of the overall competition.

This is the fifth consecutive year the company's hybrids have earned the title of Grand Champion Silage Hybrid. Results were announced at a special awards luncheon at World Dairy Expo.

AgSource Cooperative Services, DairyBusiness Communications, the University of Wisconsin, Hay and Forage Grower magazine and World Dairy Expo coordinate the annual World's Forage Analysis Superbowl.

"Mycogen's corn silage hybrids continue to perform well in a variety of conditions, as in years past," said Ed Nimtz, forage marketing specialist for Mycogen Seeds. "With nine different hybrids earning prizes, growers can remain confident in our full line of industry-leading Silage-Specific™ corn hybrids."

"Silage samples from Vermont, Michigan, Wisconsin, New York, and Ohio represented the broad line of Mycogen™ brand FullTime™ and TMF™ forage hybrids," explained Nimtz. "Our lineup allows growers to choose the appropriate hybrid for their geography and management practices."

To qualify, corn silage samples needed to be between 30 percent to 50 percent dry matter, ensiled and fermented prior to entry. Representative samples were collected from morning and evening feedings on the same day and mailed to the testing laboratory for analysis, according to contest rules. This year's contest featured 91 different corn silage entries.

Once at the laboratory, corn silage was analyzed for dry matter, crude protein, acid detergent fiber (ADF), neutral detergent fiber (NDF), and neutral detergent fiber digestibility (NDFD).

The grand champion of the Dairy Corn Silage division was Ted Grembowicz from Clarendon, Vt., who entered Mycogen F 407. The grand champion first time entrant was Cash Ruane, N. Clarendon, Vt.

The top ten corn silage winners also planted Mycogen Seeds silage hybrids, including Dave De Kam, Falmouth, Mich.; Dallman Farms, Brillion, Wis.; Petro Farms, Allegan, Mich.; Sand Creek Dairy LLC, Hastings, Mich.; Ernie Goodrich, Salsbury, Vt.; Hidden Hills Dairy, McBain, Mich.; David Smithgall, Perry, N.Y.; Wayside Dairy, Greenleaf, Wis.; Autumn Vista Dairy, McBain, Mich.; and Sorg Dairy Farm, Glenford, Ohio.

MACA Honors Crop Production Industry Leaders

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The Mid America CropLife Association (MACA) honored several industry, media and academic leaders at its recent annual meeting in Indianapolis, Ind.

Syngenta Corporation's Bob Woods received the Association's Industry Vision Award. The award is presented annually to industry leaders who provide exemplary vision on the issues affecting midwestern agriculture.

The MACA Educator of the Year Award went to University of Illinois' (Urbana-Champaign) Dr. Bill Simmons. He has been one of the leading educators in the Midwest for many years, having been working at the U of IL for 15 years. Simmons is known for relating to students and his outreach programs on water quality as it pertains to crop protection products. His research work is applied and deals with crop production systems.

Paul Schrimpf, group editor for CropLife magazine and Farm Chemicals International, received the Ruth White Media Award for his editorial efforts covering the crop protection industry. Since 1998, he has covered the manufacturing and distribution channel at Meister Publishing, which is based in Cleveland, Ohio.

The CropLife Ambassador of the Year Award was presented to Doug Mertens, field sales manager for NK Brand Syngenta Seeds, Columbia, Mo. Since 2001, he's made 19 presentations to students to promote the benefits of crop protection and America's abundant food supply. He's also participated in the Children's Barnyard at the Boone County Fair for eight years and the Wonderful World of Ag at the American Royal for the last five years.

Finally, MACA President Ron Utterback presented the Association's most coveted award — the Dean Roy Achievement Award — named in honor of one of the organization's founders. The winner is selected in secret by the serving president, and Utterback selected Bill Randell as the 2003 recipient.

Randell has been active in MACA for five years, and currently is serving his second term as chairman of the Industry Communications committee which is responsible for recruiting members, promoting MACA and its programs, and spun-off the CropLife Ambassador program.

New Technology Naturally Protects Beef From Harmful Bacteria

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Borrowing a page from nature, National Beef, one of the nation's largest beef packing companies, has implemented a new, natural food safety technology that will further protect consumers from harmful bacteria that may be present in meat, including E. coli O157:H7, Salmonella, and Listeria.

The technology, branded under the name Activin™, involves the use of an activated form of lactoferrin, a natural protein that is credited with protecting infants from bacteria while their immune system is developing. Lactoferrin also is naturally present in beef. By discovering how to activate the lactoferrin molecule, scientists were able to mimic its bacteria-fighting properties on the surface of beef.

National Beef has begun using Activin at its operations in Dodge City and Liberal, Kansas. Customers can expect to receive Activin treated product by early next week.

"We are fully committed to providing consumers with the safest, most wholesome, and nutritious beef possible," said John R. Miller, chief executive officer of National Beef. "The ability to use a natural ingredient to further protect consumers against harmful bacteria is a significant step not only for National Beef, but for our entire industry as well."

According to Miller, Activin will be included as the final step of the company's existing food safety interventions. The system includes an electrostatic application of Activin™, followed by a water rinse, to detach any remaining pathogenic bacteria from the meat surface.

Research results prove Activin protects beef against E. coli O157:H7, Salmonella, Listeria, and more than 30 other types of pathogenic bacteria. It does not influence the nutritional qualities of beef products or affect its taste, texture, color, or aging qualities.

Activin was researched and developed by aLF Ventures, LLC, of Salt Lake City, Utah. It has been fully approved for use during processing by the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA). It has also received generally-recognized-as-safe (GRAS) status from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA).

While the use of Activin will make beef products safer, consumers also are encouraged to follow proper food safety procedures at home.

"Consumers should be diligent about food safety at home," said Janet Anderson, director of the Safe Food Institute and associate professor, Utah State University. "This includes handling food properly and making sure food is cooked to the recommended temperature."

Making the Most of Manure

Adam Matthews
Cornell Small Farms Program and Terry Lavigne
Cornell Cooperative Extension
Albany County

Many small farm operators are unaware of the value of their livestock manure as far as plant nutrients are concerned, or the harm these nutrients can do to the environment if improperly managed.

At the same time, manure spreader manufacturers' specifications often overestimate the amount of manure their spreaders can hold, so farmers are often working with inaccurate numbers when they try to figure out how much manure to apply.

When managed effectively, livestock manure can be seen as a resource instead of something to be ignored, or waste that needs to be disposed of as soon as possible.

Terry Lavigne, Cornell Cooperative Extension (CCE) of Albany County, knows the benefits of accurately applying manure to meet the needs of crops and soil. He wants to help small farmers manage their manure better.

Last year, with the help of a grant from the CCE Grants Program For Innovative Small Farm Education offered by Cornell's Small Farms Program, Lavigne started the Capital District Small Farms Initiative to try to improve manure management practices of small farms.

After having little success generating farmer interest through various publications, Lavigne began making personal visits to small farms, talking about manure management and passing out his business card with a simple note explaining the project. After four weeks, he found a number of small farms eager to participate. Eventually a total of nine small farms were willing to act as hosts for workshops.

Lavigne then conducted a series of workshops demonstrating the techniques that could be used to more accurately apply manure. The participating farms needed one current soil sample for a crop field and a current manure sample. Several farms had this information or were willing to pay for the samples themselves.

Each workshop started with a review of the nutrient cycle, the farm's soil and manure samples, and how the soil analysis determines the amount of nutrients/manure required per acre. Their spreaders were then measured and capacity calculated to determine how many loads were needed per acre. Next, a load of manure was spread, demonstrating several ways of determining the area covered. The group then determined if the speed of application or the rate of application by the spreader needed to be changed to match the rate determined from the manure and soil analyses.

A total of fifty-four farmers participated in the workshops. The nine host farmers used their own facilities, chose which fields would be tested, performed the calibrations and spreading operations, and helped other attendees with calculations. Five farmers also paid for their own soil and manure samples, and two had their whole farms sampled as a result.

The workshop revealed that only one of the manure spreaders that Lavigne's group calibrated was very close to the capacity the manufacturer said it would hold, and six of seven spreaders were at least 10 percent off, all holding less than what was expected.

As a result of the workshops, some of the farms with no history of soil and manure testing are having their soils and manure tested so they can handle their livestock manure as a fertilizer product. Two farms made arrangements to soil sample in the spring, and three others had the sampling done this past fall. Fourteen of the 54 participants had some soil samples, but were not relying on them for guidance. These farms plan to get their manure tested and begin working on matching their manure nutrients to their farms' fertility needs.

In addition to these benefits of the workshops, Lavigne's project produced some valuable insights about how to get small farmers involved. Personal contact turned out to be far more productive than print media, resulting in many good contacts and a full complement of demonstration farms.

"For this particular project," said Lavigne, "the personal approach worked where the mailings and newsletters did not. We learned to be ready to approach a task from a different direction if the conventional method fails. This project's key to success stems from the fact that hardly anyone wants to harm the environment, and everyone wants to save money.

ASAE Seeks To Revise Standard On Ag Facilities Lighting

ST. JOSEPH, Mich. — The American Society of Agricultural Engineers (ASAE) has invited interested parties to participate in a project to revise its engineering standard EP344.2, Lighting for Dairy Farms and the Poultry Industry.

According to ASAE Standards Director Scott Cedarquist, the proposed revision includes an expanded scope, which will now encompass a broader range of agricultural lighting applications. The current standard applies only to dairy and poultry facilities. The proposed document, tentatively titled "Lighting Systems for Agricultural Facilities," would also cover swine and equine structures as well as work areas, lot facilities, greenhouses, fruit and vegetable processing and storage, and indoor aquaculture.

The draft is currently being reviewed by an ASAE technical subcommittee and other outside interest groups. To ensure a technically accurate and well-balanced document, ASAE encourages input from affected parties.

Participants in ASAE standards development are usually engineers, but non-engineers, especially farmers, are valued for their practical experience with engineered equipment and structures.

Persons interested in learning more about the project or participating in the revision process should contact Scott Cedarquist at ASAE Headquarters, (269) 428-6331, cedarq@asae.org; or project leader Ron MacDonald, Agviro, Inc., Guelph, Ontario, (519) 836-9727, rmacdonald@agviro.com.

Garst Offers Poncho On Corn Seed

SLATER, Iowa — As a further advantage of using Garst seed corn, the seed company has announced that it will offer Poncho seed-applied insecticide (SAI) on select corn products for 2004. Garst will offer the Poncho SAI has two rates: 250 and 1250.

Poncho 250 offers growers early-season insect protection against cutworms, wireworms, white grubs, seed corn maggots, grape colaspis, flea beetles, chinch bugs and other early season pests.

Results from 471 comparisons with untreated seed over the last three years have shown that Poncho 250 treated seed produced an average of 8.4 bushel yield improvement per acre, according to Gustafson, the manufacturer of the insecticide.

Poncho 250 coupled with Garst's latest YieldGard® Corn Rootworm products provides growers with new ways to protect against a variety of yield-robbing pests.

ErReR Farms Angus Heifer Sells For $31,000

SOMERSET (Somerset Co.) — EHF Missie D016, a prized Angus heifer was the top selling female at ErReR Hill Farms' third Angus Production Sale that took place on Nov. 8. Three Trees Ranch, an Angus breeder located in Sharpsburg, Georgia, purchased the heifer for $31,000.

Missie D016 has interim Expected progeny Differences (EPDs) that project her among the top 1 percent of non-parent Angus females for both IMF EPD and ultrasound percent Retail Product EPD. EPD is a prediction of how future progeny of a parent are expected to perform.

Over 200 people attended the auction that took place at the farm in Lincoln Township. The auction, one of its only type in Somerset County, featured Angus females from one of the oldest ongoing operations in the Keystone State. The sale was auctioneered by Steve Dorran of Canada, and by the end of the afternoon, 57 head consisting of 37 lots were sold.

The next sale event, the Fifth Performance Tested Angus Bull and Commercial Female Sale will take place in April 2004.

INCREASE INTAKE AND INCREASE PROFIT!

Increase intake with a Vertical TMR Mixer with New Direction Equipment. The NDE Mixer does not pulverize the feed; it quickly and gently mixes your feed into a palatable ration with correct particle size, and fewer fines. Your cows will eat more, because the feed will taste better!

For a demonstration, call today for the dealer nearest you.

Portable Tractor Saw

Cut cordwood, pulpwood, firewood, ties or any other type of wood ...anywhere. Hook it up to your 3 point hitch, attach the PTO and move the Woodsman Saw to any location. As soon as you place a log on the sturdy 40" table, you'll get the feel of balanced-torque action. A light hand pressure moves the log into the blade, release the pressure and the spring loaded table rocks back on dual roller bearings, ready for the next cut. Built on a rugged steel frame, the Model 250 is engineered for years of heavy duty use.

Model 250 Specifications

Saw blade	30" diameter
Table	40" x 10 1/2", mounted on dual roller bearings
Operating speed	1300 RPM
PTO speed	450 RPM
Depth of cut	12"
Drive	Matched V-belts
Shaft	Mounted on sealed, self-aligning ball bearings
Overall dimensions	38" x 44" x 44"

Our Specialty
We stock them, stock the parts, pinions, gears, bearings, seals & gaskets, splined out puts, shafts, housing adaptors/reducers, and pilot bearing holders. With little or no changes, these new clutch/gear reduction assemblies could fit your gas or diesel engine - 50-100hp. Five different gear ratios. A valuable link between your engine and power take-off shaft equipment.

CLUTCH / 5.8:1 Planetary Gear Reduction Assemblies

For 8-30 HP Engines
Fits most — Honda, Robin, Kohler, Kawasaki, others (1-2 cyl.)

- Fits most standard crankshafts – 1", 1⅛", 1⅞"
- Aluminum Castings/Housings
- Ball & roller bearings, hardened gears

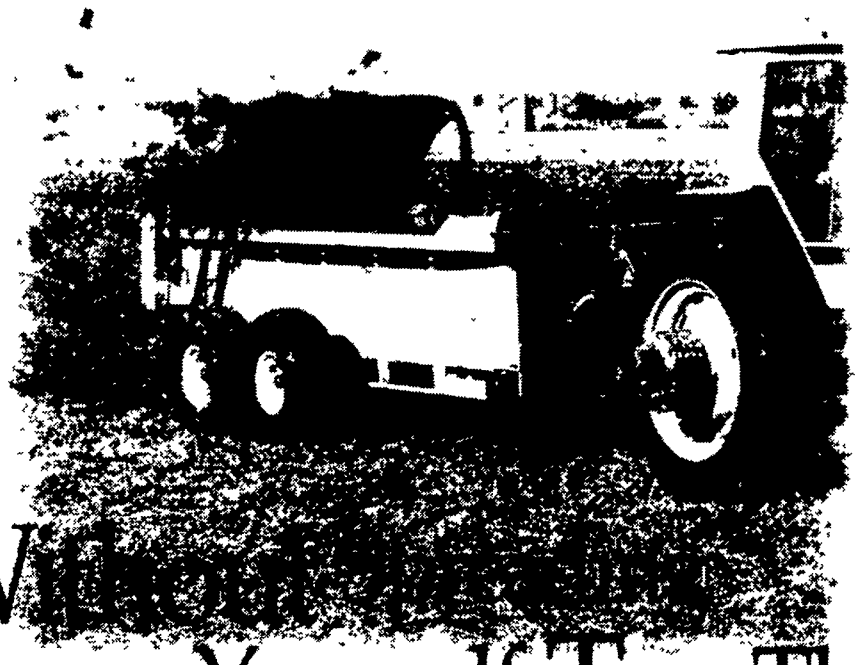
Match A Spreader To Your Needs



Without Yourself Too Thin

Get Unmatched Flexibility At A Great Price.

With eight sizes to choose from and a wide variety of options, it's easy to see how the New Idea® 3700 Series Spreaders meet the needs of any operation. Their aggressive, main beater paddles are strategically spaced and angled to shred a wide range of material while giving you a consistent spread pattern

Culvert-grade galvanizing over one-piece, copper-bearing steel sides provide a barrier against rust and corrosion And for hauling long distances, the truck-mount option proves to be the safest, most economical way to transport large amounts of material

To see how simple it is to customize your spreading operation, contact your AGCO• New Idea dealer today. You'll be surprised how much time and money you'll save with the New Idea 3700 Series Spreaders.

Handles your biggest spreading jobs

The New Holland Model 195 box spreader is up to your biggest spreading jobs.

- Capacity. The "195" takes on 410 bushels (440 cu. ft.) without flinching
- Strong construction. Corrosion-resistant steels last and last. And an HDPE floor means smooth unloading, even in cold weather
- Bonded Protection warranty. If the polyethylene floor fails or the sides rust, you'll get new ones FREE for 12 years
- Fast clean out... even with this big-capacity strong box
- Large tandem oscillating wheels... allow faster ground speeds in rough terrain, with less ground compaction

Check out our biggest New Holland spreader... from the biggest name in spreaders.

It's hard to compare tractors when standard features on FENDT tractors aren't even available elsewhere. Features like the incredibly innovative VARIO transmission, offering smooth, stepless speed selection. Consider the value of comfort, which comes standard via front axle suspension, four-point cab suspension and a roomy, air-ride seat. Then, there's the FENDT Gold Medal Customer Care program, with warranty and maintenance coverage that is unrivaled.

Best of all, the standard features on the FENDT offer more efficiency, economy and productivity. Stop by M.M. Weaver to experience the future with FENDT.

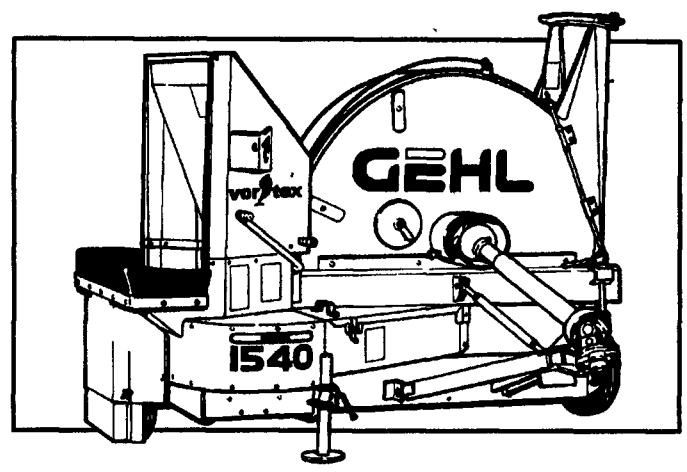
Cash Rebates up to $7,000

"Vortex™" Blowers



If you need a high-capacity forage blower to fill your tallest silos, Gehl Vortex blowers will help get your silo-filling done in short order.

- Three models - Your choice of 540 or 1,000 rpm operation.
- Twin spinners - Rifle material into the blower fan at nearly 35 mph.
- Twin-sided fan disc - Paddles on both sides shoot the crop up the pipe in nearly continuous flow.
- Split rim sheets - Feature a replaceable inner liner for longer life and lower maintenance costs.
- Many convenience features - Swing-away blower outlet, air vents, adjustable left tire, right tire guard, wide hopper, removable tunnel covers and duals water inlets.

WHAT GOES INTO OUR RED PAINT.

SUPPORT.
We will do everything we can to make you more productive from parts to financing. That's our commitment.

PERFORMANCE.
Our goal is to build the industry's most productive, reliable equipment—and to back it with a network of dedicated dealers.

PRIDE.
The way we see things, if you don't believe in quality you don't belong in this business.

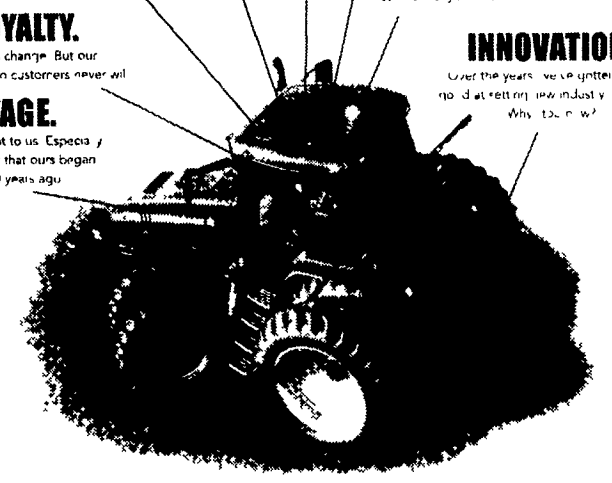
EXPERIENCE.
When you've been serving agriculture as long as we have, you learn a thing or two about how to succeed at it.

VALUE.
It's not just about price. It's about making each dollar you invest work harder and longer.

LOYALTY.
Seasons change. But our commitment to customers never will.

INNOVATION.
Over the years, we've gotten pretty good at setting new industry standards. Why stop now?

HERITAGE.
This word means a lot to us. Especially considering the fact that ours began more than 150 years ago.



Stop in today for more information.

EVERLAST II EVERLAST II EVERLAST II

Metal Roofs Aren't Created Equal

EVERLAST II IS BETTER:
- it is galvanized heavier, like old times.
- it is heat formed, less paint cracks.
- is cut while hot, prevents early edge rust.
- won't scratch as easy, paint is harder.
- won't bend or buckle as easy, stronger design.
- laps are tighter, and virtually invisible.
- nail/screws seal better, ribs fit tighter to head.
- zinc phosphate, not chromate under paint.
- still priced about the same or less.

EVERLAST II
is excellent for houses and barns.
DOUBLE DIPPED GALVANIZED is proven best for animals.
STANDING SEAM
is ideal for houses.

Galvanized or Galvalume?

For metal roofing and siding, which is better, painted Galvanized or painted Galvalume?. Galvanizing is many times better if it's mill certified G100. Why is it better? Galvanizing tends to "heal" when scratched. The more galvanizing, the better. Everlast is ten times better at "healing" than galvalume because galvalume hardly "heals" at all when scratched. Also cut edges rust quickly on galvalume.

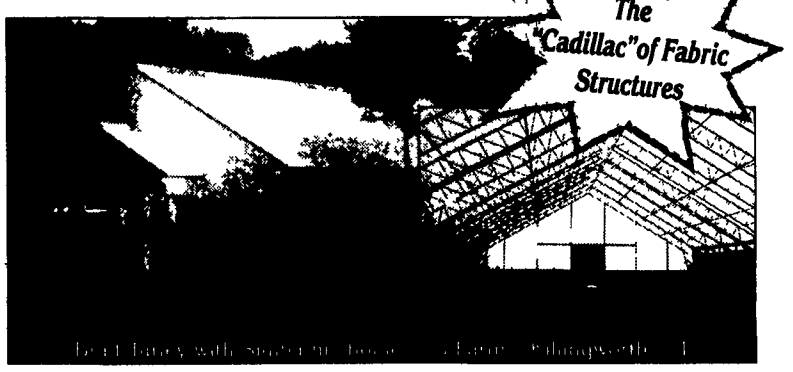
A Division of Quality Fencing

You Must Hear what Brad says:

"I couldn't be more pleased with my riding arena!"



"I knew what I wanted and I found it! After extensive research I knew I needed a fabric structure from We Cover. The facts that made my decision were:

"The Engineering – when I saw their heavy built trusses and engineered drawings, I knew their building would hold up to the Atlantic Coastal winds and snow.

"The Lighting – I can ride my horse in the natural light with no shadows to spook my horse.

"The Design – The Building has straight side walls giving me plenty of clearance for riding. The fabric is in 12' panels and each panel is tightened by a ratchet system. Add to the this the convenient overhang and a sensible ventilation system. These excellent features combined with the many options of this building package make it a real winner!

"My local building engineer is so impressed, he says he will never again recommend a traditional building for an indoor riding arena. "I recommend you call We Cover today!"

The strength, integrity, and appearance of a solid building along with the lighting and construction advantages of a fabric structure.

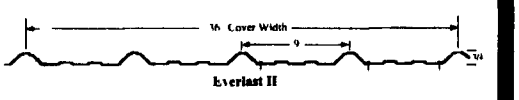
Metal Roofing & Siding

The Ultimate G-100 Process

"The Best"

1. Valspar 10S Finish Coat
2. Epoxy Primer
3. Zinc Phosphate Pretreatment
4. G-100 Zinc Coating
5. Full Hard Steel (80,000 min yield)
6. Heat formed, less paint cracks



NOTE! It is more important what is under the paint than what you see on top!

1. One of the best paints, superior acid rain, cracking resistance and color retention
2. Primer coat promotes outstanding top coat adhesion
3. Zinc phosphate pretreatment This is a very important process - if your current supplier cannot supply you with this or does not know, you should reconsider
4. G-100 Galvanized Most metal roofing has approx 40% less galvanized under the paint. G-100 is more galvanized than most unpainted panels
5. Full Hard Anything less than full hard will bend easier, lower snow loads, etc
6. Heat formed· Metal is painted before ribs are formed Most paint cracks at bends, heat forming greatly reduces cracks (check metal siding that is installed for 5-10 years)
7. Stronger design, superior strength, more metal per L F.
8. Add Everything Together And Price Should Be $53 37 Per Square. $1.69 Per L.F.

OUR SPECIAL PRICE ONLY
$48.32 PER SQUARE

USA-GYPSUM
Improving soils - naturally!
21% calcium - 17% Sulfate
Gypsum as a soil conditioner, amendment & fertilizer
USAGypsum
Want better soil, deeper water infiltration and healthier root systems?
- pH neutral source of calcium 100% more soluble than lime.
- Provides Sulfur in sulfate form - The form plant roots can absorb.
- Loosens heavy clay & compacted soils - lets air & water penetrate.
- Reduces erosion on slopes and soils with poor structure.
- Reduces nutritional tie-up & makes NP&K more available.
- Improves acid soils especially when co-used with lime.
- Prepare soil for no-till. Unlike lime, which must be incorporated into the soil and come in contact with soil acids to be released, gypsum supplies a constant supply of soluble calcium to the soil.
- Improves fruit & produce quality & reduces some plant disease.

HIGH CONTACT CONDITIONING ROLLS
MADE OF HIGH DURABILITY URETHANE
PROMOTES FAST CROP DRY DOWN
AVAILABLE FOR 2300 AND 2500 SERIES HEADERS ON HW300, HW320, AND HW340 WINDROWERS
These precision formed, urethane conditioning rolls provide the ability to set and maintain a minimal roll gap
The manufacturing process allows tighter tolerances to be held, increasing surface contact area, producing more crush than intermeshing lugged rolls

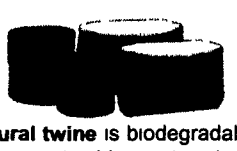
NEW HOLLAND



New Holland natural twine is biodegradable and is fully treated to resist mildew, rot, rodents, and insects. Unlike some other "natural" twines, New Holland twine is made of Brazilian Sisal, the highest quality twine material on the market today
New Holland twine is uniform in thickness and strength throughout the entire length

AVAILABLE SIZES

Length	Knot Strength
7200	160
9000	130
10000	115
16000	180 Tensile

bridon

Twine that's uniform in diameter produces the most durable, consistent knots For you, strong knots mean fewer headaches like missed or loose bales. For tighter bales, stronger knots, and longer bale life, look to Bridon Cordage No one makes a better quality plastic twine.

I have three 575 New Holland Balers and have purchased applicators and Cropsaver™ from Messick's I have found that I can bale earlier and later in the day and can also use larger windrows Also, higher moisture bales don't heat up and cure better with less spoilage Using Cropsaver™ ensures me a top quality hay product after baling The staff at Messick's knows hay tools and provides parts and service when needed

- Reduces drift by 50-80% when compared to conventional low drift nozzles (link to chart)
- Operates at lower pressures. Optimal pressure is 20-60 psi; overall range is 15-90 psi (great with rate controllers).
- Fits standard caps; can be used on all types of sprayers.
- Most economical air injection nozzle.
- Unique patented air cleaning system - prevents air hole plugging.
- Compact size - 7/8" long.
- Excellent coverage - proven in field comparisons against other air induction nozzles.
- No tools required for servicing.
- Less waste than other air induction nozzles due to consistent performance.
- Drift control made easy.

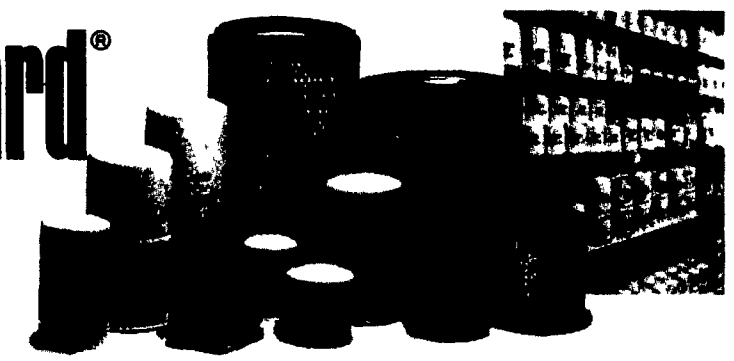
FLEETGUARD FILTERS

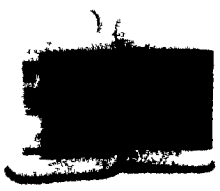
Fleetguard®



Fleetguard, Inc. is the leading worldwide designer and manufacturer of filtration products and exhaust systems for heavy-duty diesel powered equipment. Their broad product lines cover a wide variety of applications and markets, including:

- Heavy-, medium- and light-duty trucks
- Industrial equipment for construction, mining, agriculture
- Power generation

FLEETGUARD COOLING SYSTEM PRODUCTS



ES Compleat™ Goes The Distance

Estimates project that more than 40% of heavy-duty engine repair costs are related to the cooling system. It is critical that you receive maximum protection for your cooling system—with minimum maintenance hassle—to prevent downtime and lower your total operating costs

Antifreeze/Coolants

Fleetguard® offers a full line of heavy-duty coolant products that provide a clear advantage over competitive antifreeze products by preventing liner pitting, corrosion and scale that can damage your heavy-duty cooling system ES Compleat Extended Life antifreeze/coolants are fully-formulated and contain organic acids that provide superior diesel engine protection Fleetguard's Universal EG and PG low silicate antifreeze/coolants can be mixed with good quality water and supplemental coolant additives (SCAs) that offer basic in cooling system protection
